PREDICTS GENERAL FOOD PRICE BREAK WITHIN FORTNIGHT

Commissioner Hartigan Expects New Crops and Stocks from West to be Effective.

EMERSON BLAMES EXPORTS

Finds Little Suffering, but Sees Hardship Near Unless Situation Is Relieved.

PRICE AGITATORS ORGANIZE

Governor Denies Charging Plot, but Explains That Propagandists Exaggerated Trouble.

While developments yesterday supported the opinion generally held among public officials that there was no widespread suffering because of lack of food and that bearish influences would cause a decided break in prices in the reasonably near future, the organizations and individuals active in the agitation against high prices refused to believe that relief would come without their efforts, and formed themselves into a permanent organization, with the purpose of obtaining cheaper food by radical action.

Health Commissioner Haven Emerson submitted to the Mayor a report in which it was represented that the increase in the export of staple foodstuffs from 1914 to 1916 had been even greater than was popularly conjectured, and had had a marked influence on high prices; that the amount of perishable food held in the cold storage plants of the city was "not unusual"; that the retail dealers in food were not exacting disproportionate profits, in some cases even selling at a loss, and that "there is less dependency and real need in the city than has been common for many years past."

The report said further that there did "not seem to be any sudden or recently developed emergency in the food situation in the city," and Joseph Hartigan, Commissioner of the Mayor's Bureau of Weights and Measures, agreed by saying that the present situation could not be called a crisis. Yet both were of the opinion expressed by Charities Commissioner Kingsbury in his report to the Mayor on Friday that there had been a steady rise in the prices of food that had begun to pinch families of small income and would soon cause real suffering if not checked.

That the rise would be checked, Mr. Hartigan repeated, and to the evidence of a beginning of the break in prices which he presented on Saturday afternoon in the case of onions and poultry was added the fact that on Saturday night potatoes at wholesale dropped from $10 and $11.50 for a barrel of 180 pounds to $9 and $10.75 a barrel in the Wallabout Market. This decline was not reported until yesterday, and Commissioner Hartigan took it to mean that the opening of the potato, onion, and poultry markets this morning would see a general falling off in prices, which would be followed by daily drops, until the arrival of large quantities of foodstuffs now approaching New York on clear tracks would cause the real break. Mr. Hartigan expected the full effect of the receipt of new season produce, added to the influence of boycotts, probable Government action, and the approach of the Spring season, to be felt within two weeks. The chief contributing cause of the decline, he thought, would come from the fact that railroads had succeeded in opening their tracks and sending empty cars from New York to food production centres.

Governor Whitman, who was at the St. Regis yesterday, was hit by advancing prices when he found many dishes on the hotel menu 10 cents dearer than on Saturday. The Governor said that in applying the terms "exaggerated" and "inspired" to the food agitation on Saturday, he had not meant to charge that the movement against high prices was originated or engineered by persons with ulterior motives, but that all lawlessly inclined persons as well as partisans of the Central Powers were lending their voices and energies to make the noise louder than it would be under the influence of simple dissatisfaction with present conditions.

"I did not mean to intimate," said the Governor, "that any particular foreign element in the city was responsible for the disorders of the last few days, but that persons normally inclined to make trouble, to stir up disturbances against anything and everything, had taken advantage of the opportunity afforded in the present situation to excite the people. Also, no doubt, some of the comparatively few persons in New York, whose most active sympathies are with certain belligerent powers, have done what they could to keep the agitation going. I have no information that the disorders were the result of a plot or conspiracy, however."

The principal anti-high price organization meeting was held in the afternoon in Public School 62, at Essex and Hester Streets, under the auspices of the Mothers' Anti-high Price League, which invited delegates from labor unions and other bodies to be present. A committee, to be known as the People's Permanent Food Conference Committee, was formed to take charge of the general situation,

Neutral Envoys Confer with Bethmann Hollweg

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The German Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, is reported by the Exchange Telegraph's Copenhagen correspondent to have invited the Ambassadors and Ministers of neutral countries to a conference yesterday at the Foreign Office, in which Foreign Secretary Zimmermann took part.

REPUBLICANS MAY REVIVE FILIBUSTER

Senate Minority Not Ready to Abandon Fight for an Extra Session.

PLAN AFOOT FOR CLOTURE

Many Administration Bills Doomed Unless New Congress Is Called.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The agreement reached last night to keep the Revenue bill constantly before the Senate until its final disposition on Wednesday night, proves today to be anything but a settlement of the major questions involved in the threatened Republican filibuster. That filibuster was planned, not to kill particular pieces of legislation, but to force an extra session of Congress.

This purpose has not yet been abandoned, and if even a small number of Senators should decide to adhere to it, last night's agreement puts them in a stronger position than ever for delaying so many appropriation bills that an extra session would be necessary to prevent the crippling of the governmental machinery for lack of funds.

It was never the purpose of the Republicans to kill the Revenue bill, they say. They feel that the next Congress, even with its closely divided house, holds out no hope of revenue legislation satisfactory to them, and if unsatisfactory legislation is to be passed they would prefer that it reached enactment now when Democratic responsibility is undivided. But the unanimous consent agreement of last night makes it certain that this bill, which would have been passed anyway, will prevent consideration of all other measures until three days before the end of the session.

The only exceptions relate to the Flood Control bill supported by Mississippi and Louisiana Senators, which may be taken up for not more than five hours tomorrow, and the comparatively unimportant Indian Appropriation bill, which, under the agreement, must be disposed of after two hours' consideration tomorrow. Neither of these bills affects the general congestion on the calendar, and when the vote is taken on the Revenue bill at 8 o'clock Wednesday night, six major appropriation bills, a host of nominations and some important general measures will remain to be disposed of.

May Force an Extra Session.

In this situation four determined Senators can prevent the enactment of almost everything. It remains to be seen whether Republican Senators, or any sufficient group of them, will take the responsibility of thus forcing the President to call Congress in session. There is undoubtedly a general feeling among the Republicans that the President should not be left for nine months to handle the foreign crisis without legislative advice. A well-informed Republican said this afternoon that this situation had not been changed by the agreement on the Revenue bill and that in his opinion an extra session would have to be called.

These Republicans believe that the President, in calling an extra session of the Senate almost at the last hour, opened the way for the accomplishment of certain things on which he has set his heart without in any way meeting their desires that Congress stand at his elbow in touch with every foreign development. They point out that the Senate alone can consider only nominations and treaties, and they expect the President to urge before the Senate in its extraordinary session confirmation of the treaty with Colombia, which has rested so long on the Senate's calendar, and the appointment of Dr. Cary Grayson to be Rear Admiral.

It was intimated in high quarters yesterday that there was one other matter that the President wanted to have considered by the Senate at its session after March 5. That is a revision of the rules permitting unlimited debate. It is under these rules, of course, that the present filibuster is possible, and the President wishes to see the repetition of this situation made impossible. Some provision for cloture in the Senate rules would accomplish this result, and a fight on the subject is expected.

Nearly 110 years have elapsed since the Senate rules were amended in any important particular. There has always been a radical minority in the Senate that favored limiting the time of debate, and this minority succeeded a year ago in inducing the Democratic conference to appoint a committee to investigate and report at the next session. But wide differences of opinion prevailed, and the fight was not brought to the floor of the Senate.

Administration Bills Doomed.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—That nearly all pending general legislation so long urged by the President must fail at this session of Congress now is practically conceded by every one. If the revenue, army and navy, sundry civil and minor appropriation measures still pending get through, that is all that the most sanguine Democrats expect. Substitution of a lump appropriation for the River and Harbor bill is almost conceded. The Public Buildings bill is generally admitted to be dead. The Flood Control bill will be talked to death tomorrow in the five hours allotted to it. Railroad

EDWIN GOULD, JR., KILLED ON HUNT BY HIS OWN GUN

Was Clubbing 'Coon Caught in Trap When Trigger Caught, Firing the Weapon.

SHOT SEVERED AN ARTERY

Young Hunter Died Before His Sole Companion on Lonely Island Could Give Aid.

FATHER IS BRINGING BODY

Mother Prostrated at News of Tragedy, Which Occurred Near Jekyl Island.

Special to The New York Times.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Feb. 25.—Edwin Gould, Jr., 23 years old, who was staying at his father's Winter home on Jekyl Island, was killed last night by the discharge of a shotgun in his hands while he was trying to kill a raccoon found in a trap he had set.

With Noyes Reynolds, tutor to the children of Tracy Dows of New York on Jekyl Island, Gould left Jekyl yesterday afternoon in a canoe for Latham's Hammock, a small island about two miles from Jekyl, owned by his father, to hunt raccoons and to look at traps set on a former visit to the place, which is infested with these small animals.

Gould found a large raccoon fastened in a trap and began to strike it with the butt of his gun. The gun was discharged, the load of shot penetrating his left groin, making a wound about two inches in diameter, severing the femoral artery and lodging in the pelvis. Gould died of profuse hemorrhage from the wound in a few minutes, and before any assistance could be rendered him.

Left the Body and Called Help.

Reynolds tried to drag the body to the canoe, but was unable to do so. He fell into the water in his haste, and experienced some difficulty in reaching Jekyl Island, where his cries at the wharf brought assistance. A motor boat was dispatched to Hammock and the body was brought to Jekyl about 11 o'clock last night. This morning it was brought to Brunswick and embalmed for the journey to New York.

The private car Dixie, owned by Edwin Gould, Sr., was at Brunswick and was sent to Thalmann Junction on the Seaboard Air Line to meet Mr. Gould, who was at St. Augustine, Fla., at the time of the accident. A special train is now on the way to New York, carrying Mr. Gould and the body of his son.

Expressions of deep sympathy were heard on all sides, as young Gould and his father were both popular here, where they had come every Winter for years.

It was not until late today that full details of the accident were learned. Gould and Reynolds had intended to spend the night on the island hunting coons, traps for which had been set in many parts of the hammock. After walking for some time over the island, Gould and Reynolds came upon one of the traps in which a large coon was struggling, held fast by one foot.

Followed a Local Custom.

Many sportsmen would have shot the coon, but Gould, it was said, followed the custom of the natives, who kill trapped animals with a club in order not to injure the hide. He struck the coon across the head with his gun, holding the barrel in his hands. The first blow was not sufficient or was avoided by the animal's frantic efforts to escape, and the hunter struck again. It was the second blow that was followed by the discharge of the gun, which was loaded with birdshot. Reynolds, who was within a few feet of where Gould fell, rushed to his side, to find him mortally hurt.

Persons here familiar with young Gould's methods of hunting say he was accustomed to carrying his gun cocked. He used a hammer gun in preference to the hammerless. It is supposed that in the present case the trigger caught on branches or in the trap. Stories of carelessness on the part of Gould were told tonight by several former hunting mates. One local hunter said he had long considered it dangerous to go shooting with Gould, as he always carried his gun cocked. On one occasion, said this hunter, the gun was accidentally discharged, but without doing any damage.

The island where the fatality occurred is only a few hundred acres in extent. It was purchased several years ago by Mr. Gould, Sr., for a duck hunting preserve. There are several ponds on the island, near one of which is located the only building, a clubhouse. Each Winter Mr. Gould, Sr., has come to shoot ducks, and the island has been the scene of many hunting parties.

Mother Prostrated by the News.

The news that Edwin Gould, Jr., son of Edwin Gould and grandson of the late Jay Gould, had shot himself accidentally while on a hunting trip near Jekyl Island, off the Georgia coast, and died a few minutes later, was telegraphed here yesterday by his father, who had been spending a vacation with his son on Jekyl Island, which is owned by a group of wealthy New Yorkers and used as an exclusive Winter resort. Mrs. Gould, at her home at 936 Fifth Avenue, was so prostrated by the news that she was placed under the care of a physician. She had intended to go to Jekyl Island next week.

Details of the accident were procured by David H. Taylor, counsel for Mr. Gould, Sr., over the long distance telephone from the Jekyl Island Club yesterday afternoon. Young Gould had

Alleged American Again Arrested in U-Boat Plot

PARIS, Feb. 25.—A wireless message from Madrid says that additional evidence obtained by the Spanish authorities in reference to the discovery of a pro-German plot has led to the re-arrest of a man giving the name of Wood, claiming to be an American, who had been set at liberty.

A Paris dispatch on Feb. 22 said Wood had been arrested at Cartagena, and had been protected by the German Consul. In connection with his arrest it was announced that the police had found a number of buoys, to which were attached boxes covered with waterproof cloth and containing dynamite, gun cotton and gasoline, as well as submarine parts.

KUT FORTS CUT OFF BY BRITISH ON TIGRIS

River Crossed at Shumran Bend in Rear of the Position and 544 Turks Captured.

SANNAIYAT LINE SMASHED

Fourth Row of Defenses East of Kut Stormed on a Front of 1,050 Yards.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The town of Kut in Mesopotamia, where General Townshend and 9,000 British troops, mostly East Indians, were starved into surrender by a Turkish Army in April last has in turn been cut off by the British. Kut nestles in a sharp bend on the left bank of the Tigris. The British, working up the river from its mouth in the Persian Gulf had advanced along the right bank until recently they were opposite the town. They have now crossed the river about six miles above and in rear of Kut at the Shumran bend. About eighteen miles to the east of, or below the town, on the left bank, they have by frontal attack smashed into the fourth line of trenches at Sannaiyat, a defensive position, three miles long, covered at one end by the river and at the other by a vast impassable swamp.

The following communication concerning the operations was issued by the War Office this evening:

"The southern portion of the Sannaiyat position captured in the first assault Thursday consisted of two lines of trenches on a frontage of 450 yards, and to a depth of ten yards. The Turks delivered six counterattacks, but, although one of them was temporarily successful, we secured and consolidated all our gains.

"On the afternoon of Thursday a further assault was launched against the Turkish first and second lines to the north and in prolongation of those secured in the morning, and our whole objective was gained. Heavy Turkish counterattacks temporarily retarded our progress, but we finally consolidated our gains, and at the end of the day the first two lines of trenches on a front of 900 yards were firmly in our hands.

"These operations having drawn the enemy's attention in the direction of Sannaiyat, (about eighteen miles east of Kut,) it appeared possible that a crossing of the Tigris might be effected at the Shumran Bend, (about six miles west of Kut.) Therefore, just before daybreak Friday the first covering parties were ferried across, followed at intervals throughout the day by other parties. These coverers firmly established themselves on the left bank, securing the landing, and taking many prisoners. Immediately landings were secured and sufficient clearance was obtained, the construction of a bridge was commenced, and completed in nine hours, and by nightfall the position on the left bank was secured and consolidated.

"The Turks offered stubborn resistance to our progress in the Shumran Peninsula, but, thanks to the efficient disposition and handling of our covering artillery and machine guns on the right bank, this resistance failed to stop our advance.

"Simultaneously with the crossing of the river the assault on the Sannaiyat position was resumed. The third and fourth Turkish lines of trenches were captured on a front of 1,050 yards.

"It is impossible yet to give a full account of the operations, but the prisoners taken on Friday in the Shumran area numbered eleven officers and 533 men. Five machine guns were also captured.

"Two enemy airplanes were shot down recently."

JAPAN SENDS MEXICO MUNITION MACHINERY

200 Expert Operators Accompany Cartridge-Making Apparatus Landed at Manzanillo.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 25.—The cartridge-making machinery purchased from Japan has been unloaded at Manzanillo from the steamer Kotchiro Maru and will soon be put in operation. Two hundred Japanese experts accompanied the shipments to set up the machinery and operate it. It is hoped by the Government that this machinery will make Mexico independent of other countries for ammunition.

It is understood the machinery was purchased through efforts of Major Carpio of General Obregon's staff, who went to Japan some months ago. It will be necessary to rebuild the docks at Manzanillo in order to land the machinery. It is believed that the Government soon will purchase machinery for the manufacture of artillery ammunition.

JAPAN'S MESSAGE TO U. S.

Will Never Fight Us Unless We Impugn Her Honor, Minister Says.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 25.—The Rev. C. S. Reifsnider, President of St. Paul's College, Tokio, Japan, in an address here today, delivered a message which he said the Japanese Vice Minister of State had bidden him give the American people.

"Japan," read the message, "will never go to war with the United States unless the United States impugns Japan's honor."

By "honor," Dr. Reifsnider said, the Minister had meant such things as the alien laws in California and restrictions on immigration.

"I did not consider the message as a threat," said Dr. Reifsnider. "It impressed me as the expression of a desire to placate the United States."

BERLIN, Feb. 25, (via London.)—Although the daily increasing lists of U-boat victims are hailed here with great joy as making for a speedy end to the war, news of the torpedoing of seven Dutch steamers, received yesterday, caused a great shock to most people. No doubt they share the regret of the Government and naval circles that it could not be prevented. At the same time, the public regrets that the official Dutch note announcing the catastrophe does not mention the fact that the Dutch ships had only a partial assurance of free passage if they left the English port Feb. 22, while absolute security was promised if they waited until March 17.

German naval circles seem inclined to put the blame on the light-heartedness of Dutch shipowners, who were fully aware under what circumstances the wireless orders to spare the ships in question were sent out. No matter how often these orders are repeated, there must remain the possibility that some U-boats operating along the route in question did not receive them. Their wireless apparatus may have been out of order, which, considering the arduous manoeuvres of these vessels, is no uncommon thing, or they may have been submerged at the time the wireless order was sent, in which condition they would certainly remain unaware.

English and Dutch reports speak only of one U-boat having accomplished the sinkings. Therefore, so argues the strictly disciplined German mind, it must have been this one particular U-boat that missed the wireless order.

While one can hardly doubt the genuineness of the German regret, it is easy to reduct the underlying feeling of pride in the fact that, although all other U-boats were warned off, the only one unaware of the wireless order should be on the spot and do her work so thoroughly. Deplorable, therefore, as the sinking of Dutch ships may be, there is, from the German point of view, no doubt it will bring home to the world the watchfulness and efficiency of the boats engaged in these operations and the effectiveness of the latter.

Also, it is said to show that German orders, once issued, can not be trifled with, and it is therefore the better part of wisdom for neutrals to follow strictly the rules laid down for their convenience. What really prevented the Dutch ships from sailing while the passage was still safe is not quite clear, but it is generally surmised here that the English Government purposely prevented them in order to compel them to face danger and eventually create difficulties between Germany and Holland.

The comments of Dutch papers telegraphed to Berlin is not pleasant reading to the Germans. They suggest that for each of the ships destroyed a German ship be given them. The German Government's attitude toward this proposition can not be ascertained, and local papers make no comment on it.

Germany Pleads With China to Stay Friendly; Promises Safety of Chinese Lives and Property

PEKING, Feb. 25.—Dr. Yen Hui Ching, Chinese Minister to Germany, has sent a cablegram to Dr. Wu Ting-fang, the Foreign Minister, announcing that the German Foreign Office had verbally informed the Minister that Germany could not alter her submarine campaign, but that she would respect the lives of Chinese and their property, and hoped that China would not break off diplomatic relations.

The Minister added that Germany also promised to do her utmost to secure China's participation in the peace conference if friendly relations between the two countries were maintained.

A dispatch from Peking on Feb. 9 announced that the Chinese Government had sent a note to Germany warning her that China would sever relations if the submarine measures of which she had received notice were not modified. Another note, it was said, had been sent to the United States Minister in Peking stating that China had entered an energetic protest against Germany's procedure, and was prepared to take such action as might in the future be deemed necessary for the maintenance of international law.

It was said later that China was anxious to enter the war, in order to share in the peace negotiations and thus guard her interests, and that Japan had approved of her note to Germany.

SAYS OUR 'MENACE' WON'T STIR BERLIN

Reichstag Deputy Derides Reported Plans to Transport Nonexistent Armies.

URGES PROTEST TO BRITAIN

Failure to Demand a Safe Route to Germany Will Disgrace Us in German Eyes.

By Wireless to The New York Times.

BERLIN, Feb. 25, (via Tuckerton.)—What is America going to do regarding England's latest extension of her rights to control neutral navigation? That is the question of the moment here. You do not hear it discussed publicly, and the newspapers seem agreed not even to mention it, but you can read it between the lines of every article dealing with the subject. If you talk to a Deputy of the Reichstag on the situation he will, unless he belongs to the ultra-conservative clique, whose members, like Count von Reventlow, fear neither the devil nor the Yankees, carefully avoid any expression that might savor of boastfulness, or be considered an affront to the United States, because, as is evidenced daily, the Germans want no war with America, which, indeed, seems to them the acme of madness.

Your Reichstag member, however, will leave no doubt in your mind that Congress may talk of introducing conscription in America, as Reuter reports, or of mysterious sessions of the Naval and Military boards, or of the arming of all merchant ships with guns that have suddenly been discovered ready-made somewhere in the West and are now en route East, yet all these menacing measures will not alter the German determination to let the U-boats have their way.

It was in the restaurant of the Reichstag building that I was assured of this for the ninety-ninth time. It was some time before the very reserved member for one of the Hansa towns at last unbent and asked the question he had been aching to put: "What do you think will be America's attitude, &c." When I shook my head he explained what it ought to be. He considered it quite natural that President Wilson and many of his countrymen should incline toward England and the Entente. He would not even argue whether the President was right or wrong in breaking off diplomatic relations with Germany; "but," he said, "unless the United States already considers itself allied with England it must take notice; it must protest against this latest English outrage. When Germany declared intensified U-boat war, she was careful to outline a safe route for the ships of America, Spain, and Holland to England. If America, or rather, President Wilson, understands neutrality as everybody else does, he must now demand that England shall outline a safe route for American ships to German ports.

This German politician was extremely anxious for the preservation of America's dignity, which he thought endangered by Reuter reports picturing the Directors of all the great American railway companies in grave council with representatives of the Shipping Trust, debating the best means of transportation for millions of soldiers, and tremendous parks of artillery, while there were neither men nor guns available.

"'The mobilization of railways.' Reuter calls it. You can't go fighting with locomotives," he said, "especially when there's an ocean between you and the fellow you want to lick."

In German shipping circles the new order issued by the English Government prohibiting either the purchase or sale of ships, is considered another attempt to enslave neutral navigation. It is implied that the present unpropitious conditions have induced certain neutral shipping concerns to offer their ships for sale to English shipowners, the natural consequence being that they would then sail with English crews, Dutch and Scandinavian seamen having struck. But it is stated that the English cannot spare seamen for additional ships now; will they take any more risks if they can be shifted to neutrals?

No men of standing or in responsible posts seem to take much stock in reports from Japan, via Stockholm, telling of mysterious war preparations and anti-American movements among the Japanese, "the dangerous nature of which would become apparent once America had crossed the Rubicon." There are many people here who know the East very well, some having returned from there not very long ago.

TELL OF FOOD RIOTS IN GERMAN CITIES

Reports via Holland Describe Protests of Hungry Women in Hamburg and Dortmund.

STRIKE IN U-BOAT YARDS

Workmen at Stettin Mutinous—8,000 in Berlin Ask Higher Pay—Dutch Fear Invasion.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 25, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The facts I have sent you of the growing desperation of the German people and the troubles of the German Government can now be supplemented.

My informant, who was in Germany this week, says that hundreds of workmen in the big shipyards and ammunition factories are falling ill from underfeeding. At the great Vulkan Yards at Stettin, where the principal work for a long time past has been submarine construction, there is a serious lack of hands solely due to the failure of the Food Dictator to provide them with enough food to enable them to drag themselves to the yards.

This physical failure of the men's strength has been added to by the strike of many hundreds of men in the same yards as a protest against the lack of food.

Affairs are much worse in Hamburg, where there are greater numbers of poor people. In the middle of last week Hamburg was the scene of an enormous demonstration, in which thousands of hungry women and ill-clad children walked in silence through the streets in the direction of the house of the Burgomaster. Their progress was stopped by the police and soldiers.

Affairs in Berlin are not less threatening. Already 8,000 employes of the famous General Electric Company have made united demands for higher wages and sufficient food. The plight of the women and children of the capital is pitiable. In almost endless columns they form up at the back doors of all the more expensive restaurants to receive what in normal times would be thrown away as kitchen refuse. This offal is now distributed to them under the supervision of the police.

At Dortmund last Monday many shops were sacked by hungry mobs. When the police tried to preserve order the mobs flew at the police, and until the soldiers were called in there was general rioting, in which many women and children were injured.

The situation, indeed, is in the deepest sense of the word desperate. Every item of information reaching Holland on Germany's situation increases anxiety here, for it is being asked how long Germany can continue in her present state, knowing that in Holland there is plenty, and even luxury. Moreover, much of this smoldering and occasional bursting into flame of hunger and desperation is actually taking place at points which can almost be seen from Dutch territory. Indeed, there is growing up here the opinion that Germany is really seeking an occasion to break with Holland in order to take whatever chance there may be of getting food by some sudden descent.

The Dutch are most restrained and quietest when the danger or seriousness of any situation is greatest, and one could plainly measure the gravity of the latest U-boat atrocity in its possible consequences, as well as in its intrinsic horribleness, by the sudden marked silence, even amounting to a sense of solemnity, which came down over the people like a heavy cloud when the news was known. Every Hollander felt that Germany's latest crime against her unoffending and not utterly unsympathetic neighbor was probably pregnant with consequences whose limits could not be seen. I have never seen the Dutch people so deeply moved by patriotic emotions nor swayed by so dignified an attitude of resolution to face what the next days may bring forth.

Out of Germany's latest crime against an inoffensive neutral neighbor there emerges a new significance in the fact that just inside the German frontier there are new, elaborate, well-armed trenches. What did Germany expect, and how did she argue in not only making these trenches, but also in taking good care that all the world should know they were there? Herein lies the possible great danger for Holland.

Serre, the Two Miraumonts, and Pys Fall to Them Without a Struggle.

Germans Destroy Big Stores of Ammunition, but Save the Guns.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Feb. 25, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The Germans are steadily withdrawing troops from many positions between Hébuterne and the ground southwest of Bapaume, and strong British patrols are pushing forward into the abandoned country, which they penetrated in some places for nearly three miles beyond the lines. They are already northwest of Serre, south of Irles, above Miraumont, Petit Miraumont, and Pys, which are now in our hands without a battle. The British gained a number of German strongholds which they expected to win only by heavy fighting, and the Germans yielded to the British pressure, the ceaseless pressure of men and guns, by escaping to a new line of defense along the Bapaume ridge.

This is the most notable movement which has taken place in the war since the Autumn of the first year. The German retirement in the battle of the Marne was forced upon them only by actual defeat on the ground. This is a strategical retreat, revealing a new phase of weakness in their defensive conditions. It has not come to the British Generals as a surprise. After the battle of Boom Ravine there were several signs that the Germans contemplated a withdrawal from the two Miraumonts, ad the recent capture of Baillescourt Farm and the ground north of the Ancre seriously menaced Serre. Yesterday morning, through a heavy gray mist, several fires were burning along the German front line.

"For several days the German field batteries have been firing an abnormal amount of ammunition, and it seemed likely they were getting rid of their supplies in the forward dumps before withdrawing their guns. The patrols sent out had a queer, uncanny experience. It was very quiet in the mist—almost alarmingly quiet. They pushed in after the Germans. Not a sound, not a shot, came from Serre. These reports were sent back, and more patrols were sent forward in various directions. They pushed on, picking up a few prisoners here and there who were sniping from shell holes and serving solitary machine guns. These men confessed they had been left behind with orders to keep firing and make a show so that the British might believe the ground was still strongly held.

Further on the same thing was happening. Patrols went out and sent back messages saying no Germans were ahead. They went into Miraumont, and in the centre of the main road a mine blew up with a great explosion, but by great good luck none of the British was hurt. At the end of the street six Germans were seen among the ruins. They were fired at and disappeared. Miraumont was taken without another shot than this, and with it Petit Miraumont next door. Last night the British troops advanced toward Warlencourt and south of Irles, and they took possession of the famous butte, that high mound above the bones of some prehistoric man for which there was so much bloody fighting in the Autumn and the first month of this year.

From the direction of Bapaume the noise of heavy explosions is heard as though ammunition dumps are being blown up and for the first time, perhaps since the German retreat from the Marne the Germans are destroying their own material of war on the way back. How far they are going back is not clear. Patrols are still pushing out, but beyond a doubt they are withdrawing to the high ground of Bapaume Ridge, where they hope to stand with greater safety than where they have suffered intolerably from the British gunfire and air raids.

May Force Germans from Bapaume.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Feb. 25, (via London, Monday, Feb. 26.)—The exact extent of the German retirement from the Ancre front is not known tonight, but it is estimated that it approaches a depth of three miles at some points. British patrols are out in all directions, harassing the Germans and keeping in touch with their movements. Until they report it will not be possible to say just where the Germans have determined to fix their next line of resistance.

Nevertheless, it can be said that the British are now or soon will be in a position possible to force the evacuation of Bapaume, which has been the key to the German position since the beginning of the battle of the Somme. The points which already have fallen into their hands have stood out in the history of the fighting on this front and had been most stubbornly defended.

Friday night fires were observed in the German front line trenches. They were only dimly visible through the thick mist of the particularly black night, but it was discovered that the flames issued from burning German dugouts. Patrols sent forward reported the evacuation of the German outposts. Similar reports came from north of the Ancre, and by nightfall yesterday the British had established themselves in Petit Miraumont and advanced all along the line, meeting only with sniping resistance here and there.

Today the British patrols pressed forward, keeping in close contact with the Germans, who had retreated a further 2,000 yards during the night. Thus the way was opened to the ground which for months had been contested. There were bursts of stiff resistance from German obstructing parties which had been scattered in the rear of the retiring columns.

It is evident now that the Germans, taking advantage of the last days of the recent heavy frost and hard ground, moved a great many of their guns well to the rear, leaving others forward to keep up a show of resistance. This they had been valiantly doing for the last three or four days, firing more rounds than any German guns in recent months. The reason for this is considered as probably a desire to shoot up stores of ammunition which there was not time to remove.

The foggy, misty weather was ideal for the beginning of the German retirement, as it completely hid the purpose of the movement from the prying eyes of the airplanes, which otherwise would have daily searched out the German positions.

Official Report of British Advance.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The village of Serre, north of the Ancre, in front of which the first British attack of the Somme offensive last July broke down, was occupied today by Field Marshal Haig's forces with little opposition. The Germans also withdrew from several strong points situated between Serre and the village of Miraumont, on the right bank of the Ancre River. Elsewhere on the British front there were numerous raids.

The text of the statement from British Headquarters in France follows:

During the last twenty-four hours the enemy continued to yield ground along the Ancre. Meeting with little opposition, small bodies of our troops pushed forward on a wide front, occupying Serre Village and several other important points further east.

We successfully raided last evening east of Vierstraat, Belgium, on a front of 500 yards. Our troops remained in the German trenches for an hour, inflicted heavy casualties, destroyed several dugouts, a mine shaft, and three machine guns, and captured fifty-five prisoners and one machine gun. We also entered the enemy's positions during the night east of Armentières.

A hostile raiding party reached our trenches early this morning east of Ypres under cover of a heavy bombardment. The raiders were immediately ejected with loss. The enemy blew a mine this morning east of Ypres.

There was considerable artillery activity again on both sides south and north of the Somme.

BERLIN, Feb. 25, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—Army Headquarters issued the following statement today regarding the western front:

South of Ypres and between Armentières and Arras several advances of the British, some launched after strong artillery bombardment, were repulsed. Our thrusting detachments carried out reconnoitring attacks west of Lieden, in the course of which they penetrated hostile positions deeply, taking prisoners and destroying enemy works.

In the Somme sector the artillery fighting was spirited for a time, particularly between Sailly and Bouchavesnes.

East of St. Mihiel French enterprises were undertaken without success. Our own enterprises in the wooded district toward the Moselle resulted in the capture of twelve men. Near Lusse, on the western slope of the Vosges, German storming detachments brought back thirty men from French positions.

On Friday night a French airship was brought down in flames by our defensive fire in the forest east of Saarelben.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—The War Office issued the following statement this afternoon:

Last night our reconnoitring parties made two successful surprise attacks on German posts in the forest of Apremont and north of Badonviller. There was intermittent cannonading on the remainder of the front.

One of our aerial squadrons effectively bombarded the railroad stations at Grand Pré and Romagne-sous-Montfaucon.

The official communication issued tonight says:

Our artillery was active in the region of Le Mort Homme. Our shelling was attended with good results. Intermittent artillery actions occurred at various points along the front in Lorraine and the Vosges. Quiet prevailed everywhere else.

The Belgian communication says:

Bomb fighting was resumed with violence in the region of Steenstraete and Het Sas. The usual artillery actions took place at divers points along the front.

BRITISH GUNS TURN RAVINE TO SHAMBLES

Big Trees Cut Down, Dugouts Torn to Pieces, with German Dead Lying Everywhere.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Saturday, Feb. 24, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—In broad outline I have already described the heavy fighting which took place on the morning of Feb. 17 across the deep gully called Boom Ravine, and up the slopes toward Miraumont. The history of this attack deserves to be told more fully.

It was very dark, pitch black, before dawn and heavy in fog. A thaw had just set in and the ground was soppy. In spite of the thaw it was horribly, damply cold. In utter darkness, unable to make any glimmer of light lest the Germans should see, the brigades tried to get into line. Two companies lost themselves, but got into touch again in time. A great fire of high explosives burst over the British assembly lines, the darkness being lit up by the red flashes of these bursting shells. Men fell wounded and dead. One battalion was specially tried and their brigadier wondered whether they would have the spirit to get up and attack when the hour arrived. But when the moment came they rose and went forward and fought through to the last goal, splendid and wonderful. They were the first to get to Grandcourt trench, which lay between them and Boom Ravine. The wire was not cut and there was the hammering of the machine guns and swish of machine gun bullets.

This battalion had already lost all its officers, who had gone forward, gallantly leading their men and meeting the bullets first. The Sergeant Major took command, shouted to the men to keep steady and found a gap through the wire. They forced their way through, passed Grandcourt trench, and, with the other men, dropped into Boom Ravine.

It was a ravine of death. The British shellfire had smashed down all the trees, and the tall trunks lay in the bottom of the gully. The banks had been opened out by shell craters, and several of the German dugouts, built into the sides of them, were upheaved or choked with dead bodies, or human fragments lay among branches and broken woodwork. One shell had entered a dugout and had blown six men out of its doorway. They were sprawled there at the entrance. Inside were six other dead.

From the dugouts not blown up or choked came groups of German soldiers, pallid and nerve broken, who gave themselves up quickly enough. One man was talkative. He said in perfect English he had been coachman to an English Earl and he cursed the British artillery. He said if he could get at the blinking gunners he would wring their blighted necks, or words to that effect. Another man was an ex-waiter of the Trocadero, and after the battle he was kept for making coffee, which he did as though he loved it.

But the battle was not over yet; it had only just begun. While Boom Ravine was being cleared of its living inhabitants by the first wave of English soldiers (they were men of London and the southern counties) other waves were coming up, or, rather, not waves, but odd groups of men, dodging over shell craters, and hunting as they went for German snipers, who lay in their holes firing until they were pinned by bayonet points. Their bodies lie there now, curled up. Some of them pretended to be dead when the British came near. One of them lay still, with his face in the moist earth.

"See that that man is properly dead," said an officer, and the soldiers with him pricked the man. He sprang up with a scream and ran hard away—to the British lines.

Six prisoners came trudging back from the ravine, with a slightly wounded man as an escort. On the way back they found themselves very lonely with him, and passed some rifles lying in their way. They seized the rifles and became fighting men again, until a little Welsh officer met them and killed every one of them with a revolver.

AGAIN ACCUSES STURMER.

Prof. Milukoff Urges Judicial Investigation of Ex-Premier's Conduct.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—A Reuter dispatch from Petrograd says that Professor Paul Milukoff, leader of the Constitutional-Democrats, has issued a statement reiterating the charges made last November against M. Sturmer, then Premier, and inviting the fullest investigation of the former Premier's conduct.

M. Milukoff asserts the judicial department of the Council of the Empire does not possess the authority to demand an explanation of the charges made in the Duma, where full liberty of speech is guaranteed. He states that if the political controversy were to be transferred from the Taurida Palace, in which the Duma sits, to the courts he would be able to produce evidence completely substantiating his charges.

The advantage of an Executor who is already posted on his duties

AN individual who has had no previous training as an executor is obliged to seek dependable advice. At every turn he has to ask questions. Delays result. Lacking orderly and systematic methods of settling the estate, or lacking vaults for the safe-keeping of securities, he is obliged to employ them from outside sources.

The Columbia Trust Company, through years of experience, knows how to proceed by the shortest routes. It has devised accurate systems of accounting and checking which preclude the chance of error. It has its own vaults on its own premises. These are but a few of the advantages offered to anyone wishing to provide for a business-like administration of his or her own estate.

A letter addressed to Mr. George E. Warren, Vice-President, at our 60 Broadway office, will bring further information on these important matters.

THREE MORE SHIPS SUNK IN WAR ZONE

marine is given out through the medium of the Overseas News Agency as follows:

"According to telegrams received from Holland, on Feb. 22 at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, several Dutch ships were destroyed, which, with the agreement of Germany, wanted to leave the barred zone in a westward direction from Falmouth and Dartmouth.

"In answer to this, it is stated in authoritative quarters that after the declaration of the barred zone Dutch shipowners asked the British authorities to permit thirty-three steamers lying at Falmouth and Dartmouth, of which twenty were loaded with grain for the Dutch Government, to proceed out of the barred zone, which were still there after the expiration of the time fixed, (by Germany,) Feb. 5.

"The German authorities agreed to this, making an exception in order to let the twenty cargoes of grain reach the Dutch Government, but the condition was added that the ships ought not to sail later than midnight, Feb. 10-11.

"In this way the ships would have been able to leave in all safety the barred zone within the extended time, which was known to all submarines, and the termination of the period Feb. 12-13.

"The Dutch shipowners accepted this offere, but were for unquestionable reasons unable to ge their ships out of the English ports within the allotted time. They renewed their request for permission to sail later, and were informed that the vessels could leave Dartmouth and Falmouth either in full safety, on March 17, or, with only relative safety, on Feb. 22 by an indicated route.

"Eighteen of the ships decided to sail on Feb. 22, traveling together. Word reached Berlin on Feb. 16 of this intention, and thereupon the shipowners were expressly informed that unconditional safety could not be granted for Feb. 22, as there was no certainty that all the submarines engaged in the waters to be traversed would receive the wireless order. At the same time it was insisted that outside the indicated course no guarantee whatever would be given with respect to the danger of mines.

"Apparently eight ships finally took upon themselves the risk of the trip. If the Dutch news is correct, that these eight ships were destroyed—one is said to have struck a mine near the English coast, while the other seven on the afternoon of Feb. 22 were destroyed on the course indicated—it is to be deeply regretted, but the responsibility falls upon the shipowners, who preferred to send their ships under only comparative security on Feb. 22 instead of waiting until March 17, at which time full safety had been promised.

"The report of our submarines has not yet arrived."

Officers Describe Attacks.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Feb. 26, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The Cronicle has interviewed in London two officers of the Eemland, one of the seven Dutch steamers torpedoed by a German submarine. One of the officers said:

"The only passenger apparently carried by any of the vessels was a Dutch officer of mercantile marine aboard the Menado. We fell in with a submarine—we saw one—and we were well under way again when at 5:55 o'clock in the evening we were hailed and ordered to stop. At the same time a torpedo was fired at us, but it missed its mark, going astern, and then we slowed down in response to a peremptory demand which came across in the darkness.

"We received an abrupt order to quit our ship and were told we had five minutes in which to do so. Captain Maars and other officers were on deck, and as soon as we were hailed we said: 'We are for the Dutch Government,' but that had no weight. The Germans' answer was: 'Five minutes.'

"Our crew comprised thirty-eight hands, with the cook, and we all shifted into boats and stood clear of the ship. What the fate of the Eemland was it was impossible for us to see in the growing darkness, but we noticed that the Germans put off from the submarine by one of their own boats and took bombs to our vessel, as well as to others of the Dutch group that were within sight.

"We were sufficiently close to the submarine to notice that it was an exceptionally large craft, mounting two guns, and that the chief officer, who appeared to have the direction of things, was in a uniform decorated with gold lace. The submarine fired at the Jacatra, sinking her, and also at the Noorderdijk. The Menado is, we understand, in harbor, and there is a report that our own boat also is there, damaged, but how far that is true we cannot say.

"When we took to the boats we had not time to secure any of our possessions. We had to leave even the ship's papers behind us. We came away just as we stood up. We were twelve hours drifting around.

"Luckily it was a fine night, and the sea was smooth, but we had some difficulty in taking our bearings before being picked up by a British vessel, which it seems had come out to seek us and found us at 6 o'clock on Friday morning."

The second officer, who was interviewed, said:

"I was on the bridge when I thought I saw two masts and reported to the Captain there was a steamer ahead. We discovered that what I had seen was the periscope of a submarine.

"Without the slightest warning of any kind, so far as we could see, the submarine commenced to fire at the Noorderdijk and the Jacatra, which were the two nearest to us. Both torpedoes seemed to strike true and the men were seen getting into the boats and making for us. We gave them some food as soon as they got on board and some milk to put life into them. They wore only small bits of clothing and were half frozen.

"The next submarine came to within fifty or sixty yards of us and we could see them preparing a gun, evidently intending to fire on us. We signaled to other vessels astern that there was a submarine attacking us. The submarine at once fired a torpedo which missed. Then the submarine went down and for a while we thought she had been satisfied with hitting the first two boats, but a little later she came to the surface again and torpedoed the boats that were furthest to the rear.

"Before she fired the torpedo that missed us she gave no warning shots nor any other sign to stop, but we slowed down almost to stopping, and the submarine came alongside with some German officers aboard.

"After we had left the Eemland, we found the submarine commander had got some of the officers of the other boats and had made them take bombs with them to destroy our boat, but first of all they went below and took a lot of wine and food and things.

"We were in ballast. There was nothing aboard but sand, but we had plenty of provisions and stores, and they helped themselves liberally."

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 25, (via London.)—A Berlin dispatch says submarines which have returned to their base report that they have sunk eleven steamships, two sailing vessels, and eight trawlers.

Three More Ships Sunk.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—Three ships were reported today as sunk in the war zone. Lloyd's reports the loss of the British steamers Iser and Falcon, and Paris sends news of the sinking of the British steamer Dorothy. The latter was of 3,806 tons. She was built in 1903 and was owned in Sunderland. She was last reported at Marseilles on Jan. 17. The Iser was of 2,160 tons and the Falcon of 2,243 tons. The Falcon's survivors will be landed tomorrow.

News dispatches from Holland to the London newspapers emphasize the continued indignation aroused among the Dutch by the recent destruction of Dutch ships by German submarines. The dispatches say that there is a complete absence of noisy protest, amounting to a sense of solemnity. All reports agree that nothing which has happened hitherto in the war has provoked such an intense feeling.

An Amsterdam dispatch to The Times says:

"Everybody is asking what the Government will do. The position is one of extreme difficulty, and is engaging the most anxious attention of the Government. It is generally accepted that a few days will elapse before the Administration's course of action is made public. It is not thought, however, that this new invasion of Dutch rights will lead to war, the Dutch people themselves being anxious to avoid it, while the rapidity of German efforts to mollify the outraged sensibilities of Holland indicates that Germany also is anxious to avoid further complications.

"Shipping interests are extremely concerned and talk of the stoppage of all Dutch shipping in general. It is suggested here that one way of bringing Germany to a sense of her misdeeds would be to seal the Dutch frontier so that Holland could be utilized no longer as a purveyor of foodstuffs for Germany. The expulsion of thousands of German spies and an embargo on the scanty resources of grain would also be wholesome measures. The Dutch, however, are a long suffering people where Germany is concerned and extremely cautious."

From Dutch sources the Reuter Telegram Company learns that it was the submarine U-3 which attacked all seven Dutch steamers on Thursday. Three were torpedoed outright, while German sailors boarded the four others and placed bombs which were exploded. So far as known these four did not sink, but their whereabouts have not been ascertained, with the exception of one, the Menado, which was towed into harbor by a British trawler.

The crews of the Dutch vessels rowed to the Scilly Isles, believing that all their ships had been sunk.

Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent says the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger expresses deep regret over the sinking of the Dutch vessels by German submarines, but says the sinkings were due to the British Admiralty's having refused to permit the departure of the vessels in accordance with the concessions Germany had made.

The Amsterdam Handelsblad, however, explains that the German Naval Attaché at The Hague only communicated the concessions to Dutch shipowners three hours previous to the expiration of the time limit, when it was impossible to get instructions to England in time. Therefore, this newspaper says, Great Britain is blameless.

DUTCH MUST KILL CATTLE.

Action Necessary Because Fodder Was Lost on Torpedoed Ships.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 25, (via London.)—A large amount of fodder was on board some of the Dutch merchantmen which were torpedoed on Thursday. In consequence of the nonarrival of this fodder it will be necessary to kill a large part of Holland's cattle.

Detention at foreign ports of Dutch vessels laden with Chilean saltpeter and other fertilizers is causing alarm, it being feared that this year's harvest will be retarded seriously.

The statement issued yesterday by the German Legation here, to the effect that the torpedoing of the seven Dutch merchantmen was due "to an extremely regrettable coincidence of circumstances which is unfortunate, but was beyond our control," contains also an explanation made, it says, "to prevent erroneous impressions." It says that in view of the situation of Dutch vessels in English ports the sailing time for these ships was first fixed for Feb. 5, then for Feb. 9, and then for midnight of Feb. 10. Finally, "for reasons for which England was to blame," the sailing date was postponed to Feb. 22 or March 17.

The only date of sailing for which absolute safety from submarines could be guaranteed was March 17, the statement says, as by that time all German submarines would have possessed instructions in regard to these vessels. Even then safety from mines could not be guaranteed, shippers having been warned on Feb. 6 that the danger zone had been mined extensively.

For the same reasons, the statement says, until March 5 relative security, meaning safety dependent on good fortune, will apply to the Channel to the west of Denmark, through which Dutch transatlantic shipping must pass.

ORLEANS DUE AT BORDEAUX.

American Owners Expect Word Today of Her Safe Arrival.

Philip de Ronde, President of the Oriental Navigation Company of 17 Battery Place, owner of the American freighter Orleans, said last night that he had not received any dispatch from Bordeaux reporting the arrival of the vessel there.

Mr. de Ronde added that he was not anxious about the ship's safety, because she was not expected to make the voyage under fifteen days which was up yesterday, and he felt confident that he would hear from Captain Allan Tucker, the commander of the Orleans, today.

Officials of the Kerr Steamship Company of 17 Battery Place, which operates the American freighter Rochester, have not received any report of her having arrived at Bordeaux, and did not expect her to reach that port until tomorrow.

TWO BRAZILIAN SHIPS REACH FRANCE SAFELY

Not Molested by U-Boats After Brazil's Warning — Berlin Sends Conciliatory Note.

HAVRE, Feb. 25.—The Brazilian steamers Taquary and Tibagy have arrived here from St. Vincent.

Following her note to Germany refusing to recognize the submarine blockade, Brazil, through her Envoy at Berlin, warned the German Government that three Brazilian vessels were nearing the war zone, and that if they were attacked by submarines, she would hold Germany responsible.

Suggests Parley If Ships Are Sunk.

RIO JANEIRO, Feb. 25.—Brazil's declaration to Germany that she does not recognize the submarine blockade and leaves with Germany the responsibility for all acts from which Brazilian merchantmen may suffer in violation of international law, has elicited a statement from Germany that the blockade will not be abandoned.

It is announced officially that the German Foreign Office has declared to the Brazilian Minister in Berlin that it regrets that neutral interests should suffer on account of military measures. Nevertheless Germany has reached the unchangeable determination to maintain the submarine blockade, to abandon which would involve national annihilation.

In case of the loss of Brazilian ships the German Government, the Foreign Office says, will suggest diplomatic negotiations.

SEVEN SHIPS START FOR THE WAR ZONE

Three Under Belligerent Flags Carry Munitions—American Liner Goes to Dry Dock.

Seven steamships, four of which flew neutral flags, sailed from New York yesterday for ports inside the war zone with 33,000 tons of provisions, machinery, motor trucks, and munitions.

The first to leave was the Belgian freighter Hainut, for Rotterdam, which is under charter to the Commission for the Relief of Belgium. She is the first vessel to start with provisions for the refugees under the new agreement between the commission and the British and German Governments. She was followed by the Spanish freighter Lopez y Lopez, for Barcelona, and the Norwegian steamships Granfos and Storaker, both bound for Liverpool.

The three others were under belligerent flags and carried war munitions chiefly. The British freighter Lancastrian started again for London, after putting back to her pier on Saturday to have a patch placed on her starboard bow, and the British freighter Honduras left for Bordeaux. She was followed out by the Japanese steamship Toyama Maru, for London.

Among the steamships arriving here yesterday from European ports was the Spanish liner Alfonso XII., with passengers and mails from Vigo, via Havana. She anchored at Quarantine and will proceed to her pier early today. The Norwegian freighter Molina, from Lisbon; the Danish freighter Brosund, from Las Palmas, and the British steamship Royal Prince, from Cape Town, also arrived.

The American liner Kroonland transferred a great part of her stores, including several tons of potatoes, to the St. Louis, and was then towed over to the Erie Basin to go into dry dock for her annual overhauling.

It is understood that when the sailings of the American Line are resumed the St. Louis will be the first to leave here for Liverpool, followed by the St. Paul, New York, and Philadelphia, in regular order, according to schedule.

SURE THAT TRADE WAR WON'T FOLLOW PEACE

Ballin Says It Would be Nonsense for Belligerents to Ruin Each Other.

BERLIN, Feb. 25, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—Albert Ballin, Director General of the Hamburg-American Line, is quoted by the Overseas News Agency as declaring that commercial warfare between the two belligerent groups after peace is concluded is not probable, as "it would be nonsense if the States should ruin each other economically after the military struggle."

"Germany and her allies," said Herr Ballin, "will after the war have at their disposal sufficient tonnage to recommence exportation immediately, on account of its importance with reference to German exchange. Although certain commodities will no longer constitute a German monopoly, we will have new articles for export.

"It can hardly be supposed that actual hatred after the war will impede the recommencement of foreign trade, since all nations are interdependent. I am absolutely sure that there will be no commercial war. All the belligerents will be able rapidly to replace their lost tonnage. England will be able to reconstruct it within two years, and this period will also be sufficient for us.

"Our Admiralty is most satisfied with the result of the submarine war. Our success cannot be measured by the number of ships sunk, the most important point is to cut off traffic between America and England."

BACK THE PRESIDENT IN EFFECTIVE ACTION

Taft, Parker, Root, Choate, Stimson, and Others Call on Public to Speak Out.

In advertisements sent to the newspapers for publication this morning, prominent citizens, including men of all political affiliations, are asking for an expression of the sentiment of the American people in favor of a vigorous policy for the protection of national rights and the defense of national honor. Among the signers are Joseph H. Choate, William H. Taft, Alton B. Parker, James R. Garfield, Elihu Root, John B. Stanchfield, Henry L. Stimson, James Byrne, and Martin W. Littleton.

The document signed by these men suggests that many citizens who are intensely convinced that the present state of the German submarine question demands prompt and vigorous action in defense of American rights hesitate to press their views for fear of embarrassing the President, but no such consideration stays the hand of those who seek to paralyze any effort he may make to carry into practical effect his pledge to omit no act necessary for the protection of American ships and American citizens engaged upon lawful errands on the high seas.

"It is no longer permissible, therefore," says the document, "for those to remain silent who wish to support the President in the protection of our national rights and the defense of our national honor. The time has come to assure the President that he will have the overwhelming support of his fellow-countrymen in taking effective measures to meet the intolerable situation with which the country is now confronted."

Those who desire to join in expressing these views are asked to send their names to Nathan A. Smyth, Secretary, at 80 Broadway. All names will be sent to the President and all members of both Houses of Congress. In cases where signers add an expression of their own particular views or sympathies, these expressions, when of sufficient interest or importance, will be utilized so far as practicable in reports of the progress of the movement. It is hoped that identical or similar calls will be made in the chief centres of population in the country. One has already come from California.

Mr. Smyth, in explaining the movement, said that the plan originated with a few men last week, who called and got the signatures of the others. He added that it was hoped that many representative men in this city would sign the call, and that similar lists would be started in other cities.

William Jay Schieffelin, one of the signers, said: "Those who believe with the President in the formation of a League to Enforce Peace, feel that now is the time to join the Allies and have a real League to Enforce Peace. We feel sure that Americans who hope that the President will act now on the question of American rights are vastly more numerous than the pacifists."

RESTS WITH GREEK KING.

Blockade Will End When He Complies with Demands, Paris Says.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—Definite announcement was made here today that the blockade of Greece will be lifted when King Constantine gives complete satisfaction to the demands of the Entente Allies.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The Greek Legation here made public tonight a cablegram from the Athens Foreign Office describing as false and misleading accounts appearing in the allied press of the landing of allied troops at Athens in December and the events and negotiations which preceded it.

The message said it was untrue that any promise had been given Admiral du Fournet in regard to compensation for material yielded to the Bulgars; that the documents in the so-called cession of Fort Rupel were forged; that the Greek King did not refuse to guarantee that order would be kept in the streets; that the city was quiet when the allied forces landed with orders to take possession of commanding heights, and that the Greeks did not open fire first in the clash that followed.

It also asserted that no shot was fired upon the legations, and that order was re-established after the arrest by the police of 200 individuals, since released on the insistence of the Allies.

A CALL TO AMERICANS

to assure the President that he will receive

The United Support of the American People

UPHOLD AMERICAN RIGHTS and DEFEND THE NATIONAL HONOR

Many citizens who are intensely convinced that the present state of the German submarine question demands prompt and vigorous action in defense of American rights hesitate to press their views for fear of embarrassing the President. No such consideration stays the hand of those who seek to paralyze any effort he may make to carry into practical effect his pledge to omit no act necessary for the protection of American ships and American citizens engaged upon lawful errands on the high seas. The clamor of extreme pacifists, and of those who from other motives are opposed to this patriotic course, makes itself insistently heard, within Congress and without. It is no longer permissible, therefore, for those to remain silent who wish to support the President in the protection of our national rights and the defense of our national honor.

Our ships and our flag are being excluded from the seas by the threat of death and destruction conveyed in Germany's declaration of war on neutral shipping. The need of the hour is to take effectual measures to safeguard our shipping and our citizens, rather than to wait for Americans to be murdered and then go to war to punish the offender. To refuse, or too long delay, such protection would be to acquiesce in the subjugation of American rights to German domination. The time has come to assure the President that he will have the overwhelming support of his fellow-countrymen in taking effective measures to meet the intolerable situation with which the country is now confronted.

SWEDEN IN DANGER, CHAMBERS ARE TOLD

Cabinet to Give Reasons in Private for Need of Large Military Appropriation Refused.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—In the debate in the Swedish Parliament yesterday, as reported in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen, the Foreign Minister, K. A. Wallenberg, declared that "something has happened in the last few days which makes it necessary for Sweden to take sterner measures to safeguard her neutrality."

This declaration, which has made a deep impression in Sweden, was elicited by the refusal of the Second Chamber to vote for an appropriation of 30,000,000 kroner for military purposes. The First Chamber passed the measure, but when it reached the Second Chamber 104 votes were cast against it and in favor of an appropriation of 10,000,000 kroner. Unless some change occurs in the situation the amount will remain at 10,000,000 kroner.

Vigorous efforts were made by the Government to obtain the larger amount, Premier Hammarskjold and the Ministers of War, Finance, and Foreign Affairs taking part in the debate. In sounding his warning the Foreign Minister said the opposition would soon be compelled to admit that the situation was graver for Sweden than ever before.

Stockholm newspapers say the declaration of the Foreign Minister created the greatest excitement. The Politiken of Copenhagen says the Government will endeavor to bring about a change in the division in a joint session, to be held in a few days, when both Chambers will take a final vote on the proposal. Before that time a secret committee meeting will be held at which it is understood information will be imparted in reference to the events to which the Foreign Minister alluded in his speech.

WILSON LIBELED, SAYS BRYAN.

Scouts Idea of President Seeking to Usurp Power of Congress.

The Emergency Peace Federation last night made public a telegram from William Jennings Bryan, sent from Miami, Fla., in which he said that President Wilson was being libeled by those who accused him of wishing to have Congress adjourn, giving him extraordinary powers to act in the diplomatic situation. He said the President did not wish to take from the Congress the right to declare war. Mr. Bryan's telegram read:

"The jingo newspapers are constantly giving reasons why we should go to war, but they denounce as unpatriotic any one who dares to present reasons for not going to war. And, while advocating war, they pretend to be supporting the President, who is hoping to avoid war. They misrepresent the President's position and try to put him in the attitude of desiring to enter this war. They libel the President, too, when they assume that he wants to take from Congress the constitutional right to declare war, a right which belongs exclusively to Congress, and they libel Congress when they assume that Congress objects to anti-war petitions from the people. And the jingo papers do all this in the name of patriotism."

CROWN PRINCE TALKS AGAIN

Wonders at French Hatred of Germans, Tolerance of English.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 25.—At his headquarters in the west the German Crown Prince recently received Otto Ruschki, editor of the Berlin Volkszeitung, and other journalists, and invited them to dinner, which began with potato soup and ended with pudding. The Crown Prince questioned the editor about Berlin, in whose welfare he showed great interest. He also wanted to know the gossip about internal politics, but seemed himself pretty well informed.

His visitors had to tell the Crown Prince all about theatrical affairs in Berlin, in return for which he volunteered the information that he had arranged with Great Headquarters that all the divisions under his command should have their own moving picture shows. The soldiers were exceedingly thankful, he said, for after the fatigue of battle they needed nothing so much as pleasant diversions.

Speaking of the enemy, the Crown Prince generously praised the soldierly qualities of the French, which, he said, was all the more admirable, since the condition of their trenches and the dirt and disorder of their quarters were appalling. The French hatred of the Germans, he said, was absolutely morbid. This hatred made them blind to humiliations by the English, so that they quietly ignored Lloyd George's slanders of their greatest General and Emperor as an abnormal despot.

DAILY MAIL TO COST 2 CENTS

But London Paper Will Simultaneously Increase Its Size.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Feb. 26.—The Daily Mail announces that, beginning next Monday, its price will be raised to a penny, and that at the same time the size will be increased to eight pages, in order that its readers may have a complete newspaper giving the full facts about the war. It says it prefers this course to that adopted by "some of the more short-sighted newspapers," which have "emasculated themselves into what has been christened halfpapers."

In order to reduce the paper output and thus relieve shipping, readers of The Daily Mail are advised to share it with others.

Hail German-Irish League.

LONDON, Monday, Feb. 26.—A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Amsterdam quotes a Berlin message as saying:

"The German-Irish League formed here recently has held its first meeting. General von Ludendorff, First Quartermaster General, and Dr. Alfred Zimmermann, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, sent congratulatory messages. The league aims at the promotion of relations between Germany and Ireland, and it will support all enterprises in this direction."

Wholesale and Retail Prices for Staple Foods in Different Sections of the City Compared

PREDICTS GENERAL FOOD PRICE BREAK

and Mrs. Jacob Panken was made Chairman. Ways and means for lowering prices were discussed, and a number of the delegates clamored for a withdrawal of children from the public schools, but no decision on that proposal was made. The Executive Committee is to adopt a program of action which may include a visit to Governor Whitman today.

The poultry dealers of the east side yesterday voted to join the women in a boycott. About half the poultry shops of the east side have already been closed by the boycott, and the dealers plan to shut them all. Pickets will be sent out this morning to twenty-six jobbing houses. These things were decided upon at a meeting of the Kosher Retail Poultry Dealers Association of the East Side, comprising 150 members, and representatives of the wholesale dealers, held at Henigton Hall, East Second Street and Avenue A.

The only dealers on the east side who have succeeded in continuing their trade are those who have a general meat business and handle poultry as a side line.

About 200 women representing organizations interested in home economics gathered yesterday morning at the home of Mrs. Frederick Peterson, 535 Park Avenue, and discussed ways and means of reducing prices. Health Commissioner Emerson addressed them.

EMERSON ATTRIBUTES FOOD RISE TO EXPORTS

Reports to Mayor That There Is No Hoarding of Stocks Here to Boost the Prices.

The report on the food situation made to the Mayor yesterday by Health Commissioner Emerson was in part as follows:

The inquiries by representatives of this department covered the following matters:

(a) The increase in the exportation of staple articles from 1914 to 1916.

(b) The conditions of storage of perishable foods at present in this city.

(c) The wholesale and retail prices of staple articles in all parts of the city.

(d) The economic condition of 2,600 families who have been under the care of the Department of Health because either of the presence of a tuberculosis patient, a school child with physical defects, or a baby under observation.

Matter (A.)

On the first matter our figures support those which have been generally published, to the effect that there has been a great increase in the exportation of staple articles of food in the past three years. This enormous increase in the exportation of staple articles, without a corresponding increase in the production of food in this country, is probably the chief reason for the gradually rising prices of food in this city.

Matter (B.)

The amount of perishable food held in the cold storage plants in this city is not unusual, nor is it more than a reasonable margin for safety, in view of the emergencies of weather and freight delivery from a distance. The figures do not indicate that there is any hoarding of food or holding of food for speculative purposes in this city. The following is a summary of the amounts of the important perishable foods held in storage:

	Pounds.
Eggs, (35,841 cases,) or	1,075,230
Poultry	16,495,871
Meat and products	29,488,868
Butter	1,844,451
Fish	11,652,650
Fruits	16,515,810
Total	77,072,880

Matter (C.)

The prices obtained at 600 points throughout the city, in twelve districts in all boroughs, showing the differences between the wholesale and the retail prices, is indicated on the accompanying table. The retailers are evidently making no more than a reasonable profit.

Matter (D.)

In reporting upon conditions of the 2,600 families visited by our agents, it is apparent that there is a general reduction in the amount of meat food that is being used in these families, and some, but decidedly less, reduction in the amount of vegetable and farinaceous food. In about one-half of the families there is reported to be a slight deterioration in the quality of food which they are now purchasing. In 373 of the families the wages are found to be less than they were a year ago, and in 2,358 they are the same as or higher than they were. There are more members of the household at work than there were a year ago in about 10 per cent. of the families, but no increase of wage-earners in the other families. In one-sixth of the families we find some unemployment. In 594 in which unemployment was found it was due chiefly to sickness or physical unfitness, not brought about by the lack of food; in 1,822 families there was no complaint of want. In 813 cases the family seemed to be in need of assistance, and of these 373 were receiving financial assistance from relief agencies or friends. It was not uncommon that the surroundings or equipment of the home contradicted the claim of urgent need for relief.

A close analysis of the food bought and used in these families makes it clear that the selection of food is rather from habit and racial custom than by discrimination or intelligent choice, and the purchaser does not take advantage even of such economies as are possible. In one instance a family of eight, on a budget of $15 a week, was found indulging in the luxury of imported Italian cheese at $1 a pound.

Dr. Emerson's Recommendations.

It is apparent to the Department of Health that the present economic condition cannot be suddenly altered by any financial relief given by the city.

I strongly recommend the extension as far as possible under the auspices of the city, of the school lunch system. I urge vigorous support for two measures now before the Legislature, which will give relief to this city, namely:

A bill permitting the sale and distribution in New York City of skim milk. And a bill to remove the present restrictions upon the sale of so-called bob-veal. There is no good sanitary or health reason for excluding these valuable meat foods from the city.

Education through the public press in the matters of the selection and preparation of food is fundamental, and should be encouraged.

In conclusion I would say that there does not appear to be any sudden or recently developed emergency in the food situation in this city. There is obviously less dependency and real need than has been common for many years past. It is, however, apparent that unless the present high prices of food are reduced and controlled or as an alternative the income of families which now maintain themselves on $800 a year or less is increased by raise of wages or through relief agencies, there will be a constantly increasing number of people whose health will be jeopardized by their inability to buy sufficiently nourishing food at the present prices.

RICE CRUSADE BEGINS.

Circular to Mothers Tells How to Make Cheap, Nourishing Dishes.

The drive of the Mayor's Food Supply Committee against the high cost of food will begin this morning when children in the public schools will receive a circular headed "Facts About Rice," which they will be asked to take home to their mothers. The circular, which is signed by George W. Perkins, Chairman of the Food Supply Committee, and William G. Willcox, President of the Board of Education, sets forth the value of rice as a food, and suggests many ways of preparing it. Anticipating that food gamblers might try to raise the price of rice because of a demand increased by the circular, the committee has purchased 4,000,000 pounds of rice which it will dump into the market if the price goes above 6 cents a pound, and, according to report, if the quantity in reserve is not sufficient to keep down the price, the committee is prepared to obtain more. The circular follows:

"Rice contains more strength-giving material than potatoes and can be used in place of potatoes.

"Potatoes are three-quarters water, while rice has practically no water.

"Potatoes are one-fifth starch, while rice is more than three-quarters starch, and starch gives heat and strength to the body.

"Rice contains two-thirds more flesh-building material than potatoes. Therefore, a given amount of money will buy four times as much food value if spent for rice as it will if spent for potatoes. If used with cheese, peas, beans, or lentils, rice will give you practically all the food your body needs.

"Cheese contains the same flesh-building material as meat and can be used in place of meat and, while the price of cheese has gone up of late, only a very small quantity is needed, if combined with rice or macaroni, to make a dish that will take the place of both meat and potatoes.

"Peas, beans, and lentils are rich in flesh-building material, and when combined with rice in an appetizing way will take the place of both meat and potatoes.

"Many people do not like rice. This is largely because they do not know how to cook it properly or how to combine it with other foods so as to make it taste well. This circular tells you of various ways in which rice can be cooked and how it can be combined with other foods so as to make most delicious dishes.

"When you buy rice, ask for "standard grade head rice," for which you should not pay more than six cents a pound loose.

"This is one way to cut down the cost of living.

"You work hard to earn a dollar. Use the information given in this circular to make your dollar go further."

The committee expects to issue other circulars of food suggestions from time to time.

THINKS RIOTS INSPIRED.

Congressman Siegel Says Washington Is Investigating Disorders Here.

Delegates representing the housewives of Harlem and Washington Heights and representatives of public school parent associations will meet in the Aldermanic Chamber in the City Hall next Saturday afternoon to urge the passage at Albany of the Cotillo-Smith bill, which would give the State Foods and Markets Commissioner authority to get food supplies "by purchase or otherwise" and sell them to retailers, the State fixing the maximum price to the consumer. A campaign to try to push the measure through by force of public opinion was reached yesterday at a joint meeting of the Harlem and Washington Heights members of the Legislature and the Harlem Branch of the Housewives' Welfare League in the Hotel Theresa, Seventh Avenue and 125th Street.

Former Assemblyman Vincent A. Gilroy, presiding, said one reason why the food situation existed was because the State Barge Canal had not been completed, that if the canal—extending into the heart of the farming community—were available the cost of transportation would be lowered. He said that he had suspicions that the New York Central Railroad "had been instrumental in delaying the completion of the canal."

When Congressman Isaac Siegel began to tell what Washington was doing to relieve the food situation in New York, he started with, "If the food situation is as bad—" About fifty excited women, each with several personal experiences to relate, took the floor and informed the Member he had better leave all "ifs" out of his talk. Speaking of the food riots, he said that he thought they had been inspired, and that the sources of the disturbance were receiving the closest attention at Washington. An outbreak of protest greeted this, and when the Congressman hinted that he doubted the sincerity of the lower-price movement the protest became stronger. Later another gale sang in Siegel's ears when he predicted that the 1918 potatoes would cost more than the present crop. Many were the suggestions hurled at Congressman Siegel, and the composite advice was, "Go back to Washington and act."

Finally the resolution calling for Saturday's meeting was adopted. Mrs. P. F. Frost of Mount Vernon, President of the Mothers' Council of New York City Public Schools, said that she would try to have at least one delegate from each of the 300 organizations affiliated with the council.

FINDS SOLUTION IN THRIFT.

Everybody Advised to Look Out for Saving the Little Things.

The assertion that thrift could reduce the high cost of living was made in a bulletin issued yesterday by the American Society for Thrift, which read in part as follows:

There never was a time in this country when thrift was as much needed as now. The poorer classes are, in the high cost of food products, paying more than their share of the obligations imposed upon us by the war abroad and thriftlessness at home. The admission is generally made that extravagant living is one of the besetting sins of American life. Statisticians tell us that we waste $8,000,000,000 yearly in this country. Experts in such matters have figured out that 10 per cent. of our food is wasted by housekeepers.

Thrift consists, to a great extent, in saving little things. Supt. Claxton of the National Bureau of Education estimates that the labor of the children of this country, which could be directed to the cultivation of school gardens, backyards, and vacant lots this Spring and Summer, might add $200,000,000 to the national wealth.

An instance of the value of thrift is furnished by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, which gets $8,000 a year for newspapers left by passengers. One of our great railroad corporations requires that every nut and bolt be repaired and used again, and cotton waste used in wiping engines is cleansed and re-used for packing journals.

In conclusion the circular advised thrift of time as well as money.

BILL FOR CITY PURCHASES.

Pennsylvania Legislature to be Asked to Authorize Sales at Cost.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 25.—A bill framed by Director Wilson of the Department of Public Safety and approved by Mayor Smith by telegram, to permit the City of Philadelphia to purchase food products and sell them to the public at cost to relieve the suffering caused by high prices, will be introduced in the Legislature Monday by Representative Edwin R. Cox of this city. An effort will be made to have the bill passed immediately.

The decision to introduce the bill followed an exchange of telegrams between Director Wilson and Mayor Smith, who is on a vacation in Florida.

At a mass meeting attended by 2,500 residents of the downtown Jewish section this afternoon in Royal Hall, Seventh Street, called by the Kosher Butchers' Association of Philadelphia, the butchers decided to sell no more meat until the price had been reduced to 22 cents a pound.

At the same meeting it was decided by a large number of the downtown women to declare a "school strike" and not permit their children to attend school, because, they asserted, the children were too weak from lack of proper food to study and attend classes.

CITY BUYING FOR BALTIMORE.

Municipality to Purchase Food at Farms and Sell to Consumers.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 25.—Twenty-four five-ton trucks of the city departments will be sent out in the country surrounding Baltimore tomorrow to gather in farm products, in an attempt by the city to help smash the corner in foodstuffs which is reputed to exist here.

Four counties will be visited, and if the plan is successful trucks will be sent to the Eastern Shore. This decision was reached today at a meeting of the Board of Estimate at Mayor Preston's house. Cash is to be paid to the farmers out of the city's contingent fund right over the side of the trucks. Potatoes, eggs, cabbage, spinach, and onions are to be the chief supplies sought.

Four city employes have been detailed to each truck, two to make terms with the farmers and two to run the truck. The trucks will return with their supplies to the city markets. Mayor Preston said that he expected to cut 25 per cent. off the cost of food to the consumers.

It is planned to limit the quantities sold to a single buyer to the average amount sold weekly to one householder, to prevent "ringing in." The Mayor said he expected each day to get the twenty-four loads sold out by night, so that the trucks might be dispatched the next morning for new supplies. The city officials kept the telephone and telegraph wires busy today getting in touch with leading farmers in Harford, Baltimore, Anne, Arundel, and Howard Counties. More than $50,000 is available for starting the campaign.

BOYCOTT KOSHER MEAT SHOPS.

Jewish Meeting at Cincinnati Declares War on High Prices.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 25.—A boycott on all kosher butcher shops in this city, to take effect next Wednesday, was declared tonight by an Executive Committee appointed at a mass meeting of Jewish people held earlier in the day. The mass meeting was called to protest against the high price of kosher meat, and was a stormy affair.

It was reported to the meeting that the kosher butchers were paying from 10½ to 13½ cents a pound for meat, wholesale, and selling it for 20 cents a pound.

PUT POTATOES OFF MENUS.

Rice Substituted at County Hospital and Other Chicago Institutions.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—Potatoes were barred today from the menus in the county hospital by order of the Warden, acting on recommendation of the Health Commissioner. They were dropped from the bills of fare at the municipal sanitarium the preceding day, also on recommendation of the head of the Health Department. Rice will be substituted for potatoes at each institution.

Joseph P. Briffin, President of the Board of Trade, announced he had called for tomorrow a meeting of grain men and persons in other lines of industry who are affected by the car shortage.

SUGGESTS PRICE BULLETINS.

Porges Wants Merchants' Board to Advise Public How to Buy Food.

Gustav Porges, Secretary of the Strohmeyer & Arpe Company, importers and commission merchants at 139 to 141 Franklin Street, yesterday joined with those who believe in meeting the high cost of food by educating the public in economical buying. In a letter to THE TIMES Mr. Porges said in part:

Holland herrings, of which rather large stocks are here at the present moment, are being sold, and have been sold all this week to the wholesale trade at around 55 to 60 cents per keg containing from thirty-five to forty herrings, and I personally have seen these herrings advertised by the department stores for sale at 69 cents. This means a good deal less than 2 cents per herring, and a good herring at that, perfectly sound and first class in every respect. Rarely, if ever, before the war could these herrings have been bought at any less.

Scotch herrings, Norway herrings, and Newfoundland herrings are higher than under ordinary circumstances—probably twice as expensive; but even then, these prices are not prohibitive—they are still cheap.

If a large body of merchants, comprising all branches of the food line, would come together every few days, and get up a report in regard to various food stuffs that are necessary in every household, and if the newspapers would be willing to publish such reports, the public would read them; the public would know, for instance, that herrings are cheap, that they could buy them, and that information that they are very high is erroneous.

They would have known, for instance, that rice, up to a very short time ago, was one of the cheapest food stuffs on the market. Even now they can buy rice at comparatively low figures. There are other articles that are exorbitantly high, like, for instance, beans, and so on, but information could be distributed through the papers showing the public which articles are advantageous to buy, and which are advantageous for them to leave alone, and if the demand fails the price will go down.

The Department of Health and the Mayor's Food Supply Committee are already acting in the line of Mr. Porges's suggestion.

SEIZE FOOD, SAYS LUNN.

Declares City and State Should Take Over Warehouses.

Congressman-elect George R. Lunn, former Socialist Mayor of Schenectady, in a speech last night at Cooper Union, attacked the State and municipal governments for what he called their failure to act in the food situation in this city. He said that the Governor and the Mayor had ample power to seize the storage houses "packed with food" or to compel the speculators to distribute food at normal prices.

"If such a condition had existed in Schenectady," he said, "it would have lasted out a short time. I would have felt it my duty to assume control over the warehouses in which food was being kept by speculators. In my mind the thing lacking on the part of the officials is common sense."

EDWIN GOULD, JR., KILLED ON HUNT

failed to make secure the safety device on the shotgun, it was believed, and the gun was discharged while pointing directly toward his body.

Mr. Gould, Sr., had gone to St. Augustine, Fla., for the day and word was sent to him from the clubhouse that his son had been "seriously injured." This message Mr. Gould telegraphed to this city. It was not until yesterday morning that Mr. Gould learned that his son had died. The special carrying Mr. Gould and his son's body will arrive in New York this evening. The body will be taken to the home in Fifth Avenue.

Edwin, Jr., was the older of Mr. Gould's two children. The other son, Frank M. Gould, 17 years old, is a freshman at Yale. He arrived from New Haven last night. Edwin, Jr., had never gone to college, and had received his education from private tutors at home. When he was 16 he was sent to a preparatory school in Pomfret Centre, Conn., but ran away after being there three weeks, and three days later was found in New Britain, Conn., practically penniless. According to reports printed at that time, he said he ran away because he did not like school, and had walked the distance of nearly seventy-five miles from Pomfret Centre to New Britain, starting out with only 75 cents in his pocket. A policeman, according to the reports at the time, found him asleep on a porch.

Had Chosen a Business Career.

The young man had considered studying law, an intimate friend of the family said yesterday, but had decided instead to go to work this year, and arrangements had been made for him to take a position with the Guaranty Trust Company in this city. He went to Jekyl Island at Christmas, and his father joined him about a week ago.

His friends here said that the accident was not due to lack of familiarity with a shotgun, as the young man had been on many hunting trips, including a quest for big game in the West several years ago. He was said to be a good shot. He was actively interested in many other branches of sport, among them tennis and canoeing. He had been on numerous canoeing trips with his father.

Mrs. Gould, the mother, is a daughter of Dr. George F. Shrady of this city. Mrs. Shrady was recently ill with pneumonia, and this delayed Mrs. Gould's trip to Jekyl Island.

2 DROWN WHEN ICE BREAKS.

Skaters Unable to Help Man and Wife in Flushing Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Briehtson, 708 Manhattan Avenue, Brooklyn, broke through the ice on Flushing Bay while trying to walk from Flushing to North Beach yesterday afternoon and were drowned. The bodies were recovered by two patrolmen of the Astoria Police Station by breaking the ice and dragging the bay for several hours. They were taken to an undertaking establishment in Corona, where they were identified.

Mr. Briehtson, who was 23 years old, was sent to Flushing yesterday by Patrick Quinn of 153 India Street, Brooklyn, who is associated with Briehtson's father in the shipbuilding business. When he and his wife started to walk back across the bay, skaters noticed that the couple seemed to be feeling their way across the thin ice. Scores of persons saw them break through, but were unable, because of the condition of the ice, to get near enough to aid them.

SEEK A CRUGER ABDUCTOR.

Police Now Incline to Theory of Missing Girl's Father.

With the police seeking a young man who is reported to have lured a girl answering Ruth Cruger's description into a taxicab in front of Cocchi's repair shop, in West 127th Street, yesterday, the thirteenth day of the girl's disappearance, failed to bring the solution of the case any nearer. The police, however, for the first time frankly admitted that Mr. Cruger's original theory of abduction probably was correct.

Upon the arrival today of the steamship Morro Castle from Havana detectives will investigate the story that a girl who acted very strangely had been a passenger on the last trip down to Cuba. This girl, like so many others, was reported as looking remarkably like the missing girl.

Urges French Reprisals.

CUBAN TROOPS DRIVE REBELS BEFORE THEM

Victorious in Several Severe Skirmishes and Pressing on Toward Camaguey.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Feb. 25.—The outlook for President Menocal's success in putting down the Liberal attempt to overthrow his Government was never brighter than it is tonight. Several severe skirmishes with rebels have occurred in Camaguey and Santa Clara provinces, and in every instance the Government troops conducted themselves perfectly, dispersing the rebels in every direction. It was reported in the evening newspapers tonight that Pujol's forces had recaptured Camaguey, but the report was premature.

At 10 o'clock tonight President Menocal was talking telegraphically with General Pujol, who was at that time eighteen kilometers from Camaguey and proceeding as rapidly as he could to repair the railroad bridges destroyed by the rebels. He has kept up his telegraphic communication during every foot of his advance, and has informed the President that he expected to reach Camaguey some time Monday morning. He reported several brushes with the enemy, some of them severe, but the rebels in every instance were defeated.

It was learned tonight that President Menocal now has 7,400 regulars in the field against the rebels, including the Rural Guard; also 4,000 militia, which is being increased daily, and 1,600 volunteers. There are also 1,500 police to guard Havana. All the policemen indicted on conspiracy charges have been succeeded by ex-soldiers of good character.

The news from Oriente Province shows that Colonel Betancourt is proceeding rapidly toward Santiago, passing through Bayamo today. The rebels evacuated the town before his arrival. He is continuing toward Palma Soriano, where it is expected the rebels will attempt resistance. The next point where resistance is expected is San Luis; then the next point will be Santiago.

AUSTRIAN LEADERS CONFER.

Tisza Presides Over Economic Councils of the Dual Monarchy.

VIENNA, Saturday, Feb. 24, (via Amsterdam and London, Feb. 25.)—An important meeting of Austrian and Hungarian Ministers, at which the economic situation of the Dual Monarchy was the chief subject of discussion, was held here today. It lasted from 11 A. M. until late in the evening, with a short intermission for dinner.

Premier Tisza of Hungary presided in the place of Count Czernin, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, who has not returned from Munich. Others present were the Austrian Premier and Ministers of War and Finance, the Austro-Hungarian Ministers of Finance and Commerce, the Austrian Minister of National Defense, the Hungarian Minister of National Defense, and a representative of the army command.

WON'T SEND WARSHIP TO CONVOY GERARD

Government Relies on German Safe Conduct to Protect Envoy from U-Boat Attack.

PARTY GOES TO THE COAST

Duke Drives Engine of Special Train Carrying Ambassador to Corunna to Embark.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—As the time approaches for the departure from Spain of James W. Gerard, ex-American Ambassador at Berlin, and the Americans who left Germany with him, some discussion has arisen again about the possibility that his ship might be interfered with by U-boats at the outset of his trip across the Atlantic. There is little disposition here to believe, however, that Germany will in any way violate the safe conduct it has given to Mr. Gerard, especially as Count von Bernstorff, the retiring German Ambassador, is now on his way home under safe conduct from the British Government. There is little likelihood that the Government will take steps to safeguard Mr. Gerard's trip by a naval convoy unless there is a serious change in the present international situation.

State Department officials said today that they had received no dispatch recently from Mr. Gerard which would indicate that he desired the protection of an American warship. It was said that shortly after the retiring Ambassador left Berlin he asked that the Government take steps to safeguard his passage across in case war broke out between Germany and the United States before he sailed, and that in this event an American naval force would be sent to convoy his ship home. Under present conditions, however, there is no belief that there will be any occasion for such a safeguard.

Sought to Avoid Barred Zone.

It is understood that in going to a Spanish instead of a French or Italian port to sail, Mr. Gerard was seeking to avoid the U-boat barred zone, and as his ship, the Infanta Isabel, in sailing from Corunna probably will not enter the forbidden territory at all, a submarine which sought to attack it would necessarily go out of its way to do so. If Germany should intimate that she did not regard the safe conduct given as extending to Mr. Gerard's trip across the Atlantic, measures undoubtedly would be taken to protect him and his party. Until such a situation develops, however, or until Mr. Gerard himself sends word that he regards the trip as precarious, officials say they see no cause for action on the part of the Government.

The general opinion in Congress is that there is little cause for fear of Mr. Gerard's safety. Members generally believe that if reports that Germany might violate its safe conduct seemed well founded the United States should dispatch a warship to convoy the retiring Ambassador home. Democrats and Republicans of the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate were agreed on this point today. None of them showed any disposition, however, to take an alarmist view of the matter, as the general opinion is that it is inconceivable that Germany should refuse a safe conduct to the American Ambassador following the return to Germany under safe conduct of most of the German representatives in this country.

If Safe Conduct Were Refused.

"Even if Germany refused safe conduct," said a prominent Republican Senator of the Committee on Foreign Relations, "I doubt if it would do more than cause a little additional irritation. We have already sustained so many injuries from Germany that one more would not add materially to the strain."

"If that is the situation," said Senator Sutherland of Utah, referring to the report that safe conduct might be withheld, "I think our Government should unquestionably send an armed ship to bring the Ambassador home. It would be the only thing to do. And as to the Allies supplying the convoy for the first half of the trip, I think it would be better for the American convoy to go all the way, unless that would cause undesirable delay."

"It is the Ambassador's right to have an armed escort if he feels his safety imperilled," said Senator Borah of Idaho, another Republican member of the committee, "and it is this country's undoubted duty to furnish the escort if safe conduct is refused."

Duke Drives Gerard's Train.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—Telegraphing from Madrid, Reuter's correspondent says that James W. Gerard, ex-American Ambassador to Germany; Mrs. Gerard, and the members of the embassy staff left the Spanish capital at 4 o'clock this afternoon on a special train for Corunna, where the party will embark for the United States.

The Duke of Zaragoza drove the engine, having volunteered for the task. Mr. Gerard, learning of this, asked for an introduction to the Duke, with whom he chatted cordially before boarding the train.

WANTS TARNOWSKI RECEIVED

Austria Said to Have Demanded Some Disposal of Envoy's Case.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Monday, Feb. 26.—The Journal this morning publishes the following story from Washington:

"WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The continued refusal of the United States to receive the credentials of Count Tarnowski, the newly designated Ambassador from Austria-Hungary, has aroused considerable resentment in Austria. It was learned tonight that what amounts to a flat demand that Tarnowski be either received or definitely sent home has been filed with the State Department.

Baron Zweidenik, the Austrian Chargé, called at the State Department to discuss the matter yesterday and, following his visit, it became apparent that Austria is plainly dissatisfied with the treatment accorded to the representatve sent to replace Ambassador Dumba, whose recall was demanded by this Government.

"The detention of Count Von Bernstorff, the dismissed German Ambassador, at Halifax while the British make a search of the Frederick VIII., on which he is sailing, has aroused German resentment. The United States has been told from Berlin that treatment of Americans in Germany would depend upon the safe return of the Bernstorff party. At the State Department tonight it was said that this Government contemplates no action in the matter. It was apparent, however, that Germany may seek to make an issue of the delay."

CALLOWAY ASSAILS MEN OF OUR ARMY

Texas Congressman Tells Boston Pacifists That They Violate Law, Always.

WILSON AT 'END OF TETHER'

Newspapers, He Declares, Are "Not Perfectly Honest," and Do Not Portray Public Opinion.

BOSTON, Feb. 25.—Opposing a declaration of war against Germany, Congressman Oscar Calloway of Texas at a mass meeting today criticised the American soldier and sailor.

"The army never acts in accordance with law," he said. "Do you remember Sherman's march to the sea, when he burned Atlanta and violated every law of civilization? His answer to critics was, 'War is hell.' In the Philippines they put pipes into natives, forced them full of water, and called it the water cure.

"How many Mexican soldiers were shot at the taking of Vera Cruz? The 200 Mexicans killed were women and children. Our troops shot into one another like a lot of drunken sailors. If we go into war now, our soldiers will act as they always have acted ever since there were any soldiers. Soldiers are trained to kill people."

A declaration of war against Germany, Mr. Calloway said, would be "like a hanging where every one in the mob wants to get a whack at the victim. Of course," he continued, "an injury has been done; but why not be as big nationally as individually?"

"Had we not better stand by ourselves than stand by the President?" the speaker questioned after asserting that citizens would pay the costs of war in taxes. "President Wilson has reached the end of his tether, and it is now up to Congress to act. Let us give them our opinion to help their decision."

Mr. Calloway criticised newspapers as being "not perfectly honest," saying that some were subsidized by munitions makers. "Let the American people speak out and set a Christian example," he said. "Don't let Congress think that newspapers portray public opinion. And for God's sake, keep these meetings going."

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Emergency Peace Committee of Massachusetts to protest against war.

Says Germans Increase Savings.

BERLIN, Feb. 25, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—According to figures given out today by the Overseas News Agency, deposits in German savings banks increased 350,000,000 marks in December. The increase in 1916 was 2,430,000,000 marks.

labor legislation, the Corrupt Practices and Conservation bills all have practically no chance even for consideration. There is doubt, also, that the bills amending the Federal Reserve law and the Shipping Board act, extending the powers of the Shipping Board for emergency purposes, will be passed.

In view of the probable failure of all these important measures, there are some Democratic Senators who cling to a persistently expressed belief that the Sixty-fifth Congress will be summoned in extraordinary session, no matter what develops with relation to Germany. But with no word from the White House on this phase of the situation, discussion of future possibilities is entirely speculative.

Prohibition for the national capital, appropriations, food prices, and increased pay for Government employes will figure in the final legislative drive in the House. Of appropriation measures the House has yet to pass only the Sundry Civil bill, now pending, and the Military Academy and General Deficiency bills, which can be put through in quick time. There may be an attempt to finally defeat the $400,000 appropriation for a Federal Trade Commission inquiry into food prices, which the House in Committee of the Whole wrote into the Sundry Civil bill last night.

The Senate bill for prohibition in the capital will come up for a vote in the House by Wednesday at the latest. The District of Columbia Committee has agreed to report it by Tuesday noon, but with amendments tacking on referendum and "bone dry" provisions. The Prohibitionists are planning to fight all amendments, as the change of a word would necessitate opening up the whole question anew in the Senate.

Representative Randall of California, leading the prohibition fight, announced today that no friend of prohibition would be fooled by the District Committee's coup of putting a "bone dry" provision into the bill, designed to put the Prohibitionists into the position of voting against "bone dry" in order to get the bill through at this session.

"If the liquor advocates want bone dry legislation," he said, "we will press a separate measure through to provide for it as soon as Congress reconvenes in December, which will be only a month after the pending bill will go into effect, as we figure it."

The House Judiciary Committee will meet Tuesday in an effort to report the Espionage and other emergency bills passed by the Senate. There is considerable opposition to them, and their fate is doubtful. The Shipping Board law amendments, designed to empower the new Shipping Board to take over craft being built under foreign orders in American shipyards, pending in both Houses, on the calendar in the Senate and awaiting action in the Merchant Marine Committee in the House.

The President having called an extra session of the Senate to consider nominations and the Colombian Treaty, there is a strong probability that this branch of the Congress will remain at work for many weeks. Even if ratification of the Colombian Treaty should be impossible, the opportunity afforded for changing the long-established rules of the Senate is not going to be overlooked by a large group of Senators, who have been fightng for years to liberalize them. Senator Owen, Chairman of the special committee appointed a year ago to revise the rules, is preparing to agitate this subject in the special session, and he will have the aid of some of the progressive Republicans in advocating a form of modified cloture which would make impossible such filibusters against important legislation as had been threatened and may yet be resorted to in the present legislative crisis.

LANSING AT WORK WHILE ON VACATION

Rumors at Capital That He Is Preparing Important Documents in German Crisis.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Pending the return of Secretary Lansing from his three-day stay at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., the generally accepted belief here is that no new move will be made by the Government in the German crisis. In diplomatic quarters the opinion is almost universal that the Secretary is devoting what has been officially described as a short vacation to important work. Some think he is framing a document to be used by President Wilson in connection with an address to Congress, others that he is preparing for what is regarded as the inevitable break with Austria-Hungary.

The President saw no callers today and left the White House only for an automobile ride with Mrs. Wilson. There was no expression from the White House concerning the breaking of the Republican filibuster in the Senate, and officials continued to profess ignorance on the question of whether the President would go to the Capitol during the coming week to ask additional authority from Congress.

Official information about the release of the American prisoners of the Yarrowdale is lacking. It has been nearly two months since these seamen were taken into Germany. Their release was announced in press dispatches several days ago, but several inquiries to the Spanish Ambassador at Berlin have failed to bring official announcement of it, with details of arrangements for their transportation home.

For Better Railroad Service

To the People of New Jersey and the Public:

Before the New Jersey Legislature is a bill to broaden the powers of the Board of Public Utility Commissioners. It was introduced into the House by Hon. Emmor B. Roberts, of the Grange; into the Senate by Hon. Lewis T. Stevens. The measure is supported by the New Jersey State Chamber of Commerce, following exhaustive study of the problem, and by newspapers generally. It is heartily approved by the railroads. They take this public method to say so and why. Legislative Committees will give hearing on the bill, February 27, at Trenton.

This will accomplish in reality what the "full crew" law of 1913 was intended to do. The effect of that law so far has been to force upon the railroads in New Jersey a total cost of $1,250,000. Such expenditure, which, as every cost entering into railroad maintenance and operation, inevitably is met by the public, has been waste, for it accomplished nothing of value.

Enactment of the bill will take nothing from the public that it does not restore in greater degree. For an arbitrary law recognizing no conditions—but, with limitations, requiring on trains a given number of men regardless of differing circumstances surrounding operation of such trains and the services they perform—the bill substitutes the intelligent judgment of selected men entrusted by the Commonwealth with safeguarding and promoting the public interest.

Under the existing statute—an "excess man" crew law, not a "full" crew law as it was named to accomplish its enactment—railroads in New Jersey are compelled to carry on trains, where they are not needed, some 450 men who would be otherwise very advantageously employed. Railroads do not seek to underman trains. On many trains—passenger and freight—they now put larger crews than the law requires, this to ensure safe and efficient operation.

What this bill will do is to make certain that all railroads in New Jersey shall properly crew every train. It gives the Utility Commissioners full authority to determine how many men are necessary to make certain that trains are safely and efficiently operated, also to prevent excessive duties being required of any man in train service. It protects the public interest, as the present law does not. It adequately safeguards rights of employes. It relieves the railroads from a useless operating charge now imposed upon them. It makes for economical, so for better, transportation service.

BLAMES LONGSHOREMEN.

Pier Superintendent Says Inefficiency Delays Freight Movement.

Officials on North River steamship piers said yesterday that the congestion on the railroads was partly due to British and French freighters being detained in port by the decrease in efficiency of New York longshoremen.

"The longshoremen are 20 to 25 per cent. less efficient today than six months ago," said the Superintendent of a Chelsea pier yesterday. "The men will not work nights or holidays, nor when it rains because they have made so much money that they are independent. In consequence the steamships cannot be loaded promptly and sent to sea on schedule, although the coal supply in New York Harbor is now nearly normal.

"The railroads feel this delay because we will not receive freight from their yards until the ships are ready to load it. If the steamship companies allowed the railroads to have their way they would pile the piers to the roofs. If a railroad notifies us that there are 25,000 bags of flour waiting we send an order for so many sacks to be delivered on a certain date, and will not accept one sack beyond the number stipulated in the order, so that the railroad must store the remainder until we have a hold to put it into."

FINDS GRAVE ERROR IN NAVAL DESIGNS

Editor of Scientific American Says Battle Cruiser Plans Are Defective.

BOILERS ARE HALF EXPOSED

J. B. Walker Declares Daniels's Attacks on Patriotism of Shipbuilders Are Unjustified.

Speaking for the Naval Committee of the National Security League, J. Bernard Walker, editor of The Scientific American, made the statement last night that the designs for the new battle cruisers were gravely defective, in that the boilers were partially exposed, and that the plans should be redrawn. He asserted also that an investigation had shown that the attacks of Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels on the patriotism of shipbuilders are without justification

"The contracts for the four battle cruisers have not yet been let," Mr. Walker said, "and it is the opinion of the National Security League that because of a grave military defect in the designs for these ships, due to the fact that one-half the boilers is carried above the protective deck, the contracts should not be let until the designs have been recast so as to bring the boilers below the protective deck, where they belong.

"Of the four scout cruisers, the contract for only one has been let. In both battleships and scout cruisers it has been found that the high cost of labor and material necessitated an increase by Congress of the limit of cost. It is the opinion of the National Security League that an emergency appropriation of at least $250,000,000 should be made at once for rushing work on the new vessels and the repair of the old vessels, and for the purchase of ammunition and various other material which would be needed immediately upon the outbreak of war. All Government and civilian yards should be required to work double shifts at once.

"We must speak of what we consider the most important asset of this country for the creation and maintenance of the great navy which is necessary to preserve its dignity and safety. We refer to the great shipbuilding yards of this country, against which, most unfortunately, the Navy Department is at present directing an attack of great persistency. If the newspaper propaganda of the Secretary of the Navy is to be believed, the gentlemen behind these institutions are utterly devoid of patriotism and are determined to wring the very last dollar that extortion can obtain from the taxpayers of this country.

"Such a propaganda from a Cabinet officer, if kept up with persistency, will have its effect; and, indeed, I am free to confess that for a while I was inclined to believe that there might be some foundation for the Secretary's attitude. Today, after a careful investigation, I am fully satisfied that the great shipbuilding interests of this country are not only ready but extremely anxious to do their share in the great patriotic work of strengthening the naval defenses of the United States."

A Hampton Room of Italian Origin

IT was contemporary appreciation of the beauty engendered in Cinque-cento Italy that led to the furnishing of so many stately English manorial rooms with Furniture that bore to the sombre North a breath of the balmy airs and azure skies of sun-steeped Tuscany.

The same esteem, persisting today, is responsible for the presence of Italian Furniture of a like quality among those many treasures of artistic worth which make the Hampton Shops so familiar a haunt of those interested in beautiful things—the Walnut Tables, with their bronze-like patina and carven lyre-shaped legs; the velvet-seated Chairs, of Dantesque type or the elaborately paneled Cabinets, known to their Italian originators as "Credenze."

Rainier Worm-Drive Half-Ton Truck $875 Chassis f. o. b. N. Y.

Built in New York City by the Pioneers of America's Motor Truck Industry

Compare these features with ordinary light delivery cars:

- Timken-David Brown worm-and-gear rear axle.
- Timken front axle, 2½ in. section.
- 4½ in. pressed-steel frame.
- Wheel-base 115 in.
- Hotchkiss drive.
- 33 in. x 4 in. tires, demountable rims.
- Left-hand drive.
- Center control.
- Straight line drive, motor to rear axle.
- New double-safety spring construction.
- Maximum speed, 30 miles.
- Special Rainier Truck Motor, 3¼ in. x 4½ in., with magneto ignition.
- Highest efficiency and economy; 18 to 20 miles per gallon of gasoline.
- 10 in. dry disc clutch.
- 3 speeds, selective transmission.

A Truck, from Bumper to Tail Lamp

THE Rainier Half-ton Worm-Drive Truck Shows what a light truck can be when designed, developed and perfected by pioneers in the industry. It is a truck, first, last and all the time—a specialized motor vehicle for a specialized purpose.

Built along lines and incorporating all of the successful features of best known American heavy trucks instead of following touring-car practice.

If the Rainier cost $5000, it might be bigger, but it couldn't be better. Check over the specifications and see for yourself.

Then note the price, $875 right here in New York, for a truck chassis with a Timken-David Brown worm-and-gear drive; $875 for a truck chassis which is a duplicate of the $5000 heavyweights, only smaller; $875 for a truck chassis that stands up under a half-ton load (and a 1500 lb. load) indefinitely.

Time payments if desired.

COURSE RECORDS FALL UNDER THE FLEET HEELS OF VETERAN ROAD RUNNERS

THREE ROAD RACERS MAKE NEW RECORDS

Voteretsas, McGinn, and Brandt Show Speed Through City Streets—Other Runs.

Showing a marked improvement over his recent form in league road race competitions, Victor Voteretsas, wearing the emblem of the Morningside A. C., yesterday flashed his heels to a large field of runners in the weekly five-mile road race of the Harlem Athletic League over the Glencoe Athletic Club's course, and created a new record for the course. Voteretsas covered the distance in 27:13, which eclipses the best previous mark by thirty-five seconds, made by Charles Blankenburg of the Bronx Church House two years ago. The pick of the harriers in the Harlem district answered the call for yesterday's race, which was a scratch event instead of the usual handicap affair. It was held to decide which runners would represent the Harlem A. L. in the five-mile league championship race, to be held in conjunction with the games of the John Wanamaker Commercial Institute on March 21.

Voteretsas was not forced to extend himself to win the event, for the maintained the lead from a point about one city block away from the start until he crossed the finish line far ahead of Lew Heydet a clubmate. Several times on the journey the pace-setter was challenged for his position, but Voteretsas only increased his stride long enough to shake off his rivals.

An interesting battle was waged near the finish line for second honors between Heydet, L. Metzer, and A. Morris, St. Christopher Club. Heydet won the place by one second, and Metzer finished third, with the same space of time separating him from Morris. The Morningside A. C. led in the team scoring, compiling a low total of fifteen points. The runners wearing the colors of the Macomb's A. C. were second, with fifty-two, and the Glencoe A. C. took third honors with fifty-three. Under the rules of the race, the first ten runners to finish will be chosen to represent the league at the Wanamaker games.

The first twenty finished as follows:

V. Voteretsas, Morningside A. C.	27:13
L. Heydet, Morningside A. C.	28:11
L. Metzer, Morningside A. C.	28:13

Harry McGinn, the Paulist A. C. runner, added more laurels yesterday in the weekly handicap road race of the Lower Manhattan Athletic League, over the Paulist Athletic Club's course of about five miles. Although McGinn failed to win the event, he won the fast time prize from the scratch mark, and bettered his own record, made one week ago, by fifty seconds. The Paulist harrier covered the distance in 25:12.

McGinn ran a well-judged race throughout and came dangerously near monopolizing all the honors of the event. He finished in seventh position, after conceding handicaps ranging up to five minutes and thirty seconds, to a field of thirty harriers. George Kirkwood, also of the Paulist A. C., led the field home, from the 3:45 mark, in 29:06. Team honors were won by the Paulist A. C. representatives, with a low total of 28 points. Hudson Guild A. A. runners finished second with 46 points, and the harriers of the Seward A. A. took third with 63.

The order of finish of the first ten was as follows:

George Kirkwood, Paulist A. C., (3:45,) 29:06; J. B. Laura, Hudson Guild A. A., (4:30,) 30:14; J. Shea, Seward A. A., (5:00,) 30:50; J. Georgio, Paulist A. C., (1:00,) 26:55; J. Barinque, Hudson Guild A. A., (5:00,) 31:00; J. Cunningham, Paulist A. C., (2:00,) 28:10; Harry McGinn, Paulist A. C., (scratch,) 25:12; S. Silverstein, Seward A. A., (1:30,) 27:46; J. J. Dick Brandt of St. Anlem's A. C. hung up a new record for his club's four and three-quarter mile course in the St. Anselm's invitation road race held yesterday afternoon. Brandt crossed the finish line after a hard race about one yard in the van of L. Dutka, carrying the colors of the Hungarian-American A. C., in 23:45, eclipsing the old mark for the course, which was held by himself, by six seconds.

The order of finish follows:

R. Brandt, St. Anselm's A. C., 23:45; L. B. Dutka, Hungarian-American A. C., 23:46; W. Deegan, St. Anselm's A. C., 23:55; M. Russo, Ozanam Association, 24:00; S. Frierich, 92d Street Y. M. H. A., 24:45; M. Ornstein, 92d Street Y. M. H. A., 24:46; M. Collins, St. Anselm's A. C., 25:30; E. Sills, Hungarian-American A. C., 25:31; G. Rouse, St. Anselm's A. C., 25:46; M. Haber, St. Anselm's A. C., 26:07.

A hemorrhage of the nose probably robbed Kyron Hearns of the Pastime A. C. of victory yesterday in the weekly handicap road race of the Bronx Athletic League over the Pastime A. C., Elks Course, measuring about five miles. Hearns, starting with an allowance of three minutes, maintained the lead over the greater part of the journey, and as the runners entered the last mile he was leading by 300 yards. On this leg of the race, however, he started to bleed profusely from the nostrils. Harry Gunther challenged him successfully for the leading position, and held it to the finish. Hearns staggered across the line in second place.

The first ten finished as follows:

H. Gunther, Bronx C. H. A. C., (2:45,) 28:56; K. Hearns, Pastime A. C., (3:00,) 29:03; F. Haggman, Pastime A. C., (5:00,) 31:14; M. Barish, Pastime A. C., (5:00,) 31:33; T. Gregory, Ozanam A. C., (3:00,) 29:35; L. De Vito, Pennant A. C., (5:00,) 31:36; W. Mechman, Pennant A. C., (4:00,) 30:52; A. Rosander, Bronx C. H. A. C., (scratch,) 26:58; J. McDuff, Pennant A. C., (4:30,) 31:35; J. Only a small field answered the call for runners in the weekly run of the Catholic Young Men's Archdiocesan Union over the course of the St. Jerome's Catholic Club yesterday. The race was a scratch event, over four miles, and was won by J. Fitzpatrick of the St. Joseph's Y. M. A. in 23:03. T. Gorey and F. Wall, clubmates of Fitzpatrick, followed him home in the order named in 23:45 and 23:47, respectively.

Because the runners became confused in covering the prescribed course, the weekly handicap road race of the Long Island Athletic League over the Loughlin Lyceum course yesterday was declared "no race." A field of forty-nine harriers, the biggest of the season to date, entered, but they crossed the finish line from various directions. The officials decided to run the event next Sunday over the course of the Kings County A. A.

GIANTS IN SUMMER HEAT.

Party Reaches Marlin in Temperature of Eighty Degrees.

Special to The New York Times.

MARLIN, Texas, Feb. 25.—The Giants who left St. Louis last night arrived here in time for a late dinner tonight, and are prepared to start active training tomorrow morning under the direction of Catcher Lew McCarty, who will be in charge until Manager McGraw arrives. There were fifteen players in the party of forty people brought in tonight by Secretary Brannick. Six others came direct from their homes. Jim Thorpe was one of these early arrivals. The Giants so far are enjoying weather which would be a mid-Summer brand in New York. Today they were actually uncomfortable as they rode over the dusty plains in a temperature close to eighty. Manager McGraw is expected here Tuesday.

GIANTS' ROLL IS COMPLETE.

Davey Robertson Affixes His Signature to a Contract.

The roster of the Giants is now complete. The last recalcitrant, Davey Robertson, affixed his entirely legible and perfectly good signature to a contract late Saturday night just as the wee, sma' hours began to succeed the large and exuberant ones. There had been nothing in particular preventing Davey from joining the early rush to sign Mr. Hempstead's little document, save a feeling on the star fielder's part that it was a bit more dignified to saunter in just before the curtain rose on that pretty drama, "A Trip to Texas."

John B. Foster, Secretary of the local National League club, will chaperon Robertson and Heinie Zim, the rear guard of the team, on their journey southward, which will begin Friday. At St. Louis the trio will be joined by ten more of the twent-six straight brigade, and then the end of the on-to-Marlin movement will be in sight.

YANKEE VANGUARD ON LINKS

Shawkey and Hendryx Play Golf While Awaiting First Practice.

Special to The New York Times.

MACON, Ga., Feb. 25.—The Sunday preceding the Monday on which the training of the New York American League baseball players will be begun found four members of the Yankee squad on hand, four aside from the delegation from New York including Manager Donovan and Owner Huston, which is expected some time tonight.

Pitcher Shawkey and Outfielder Hendryx were golfing all day, and while they were thus engaged Ben Shaw, a recruit catcher, and Sam Ross, a pitcher who was here with the Yanks last Spring, arrived. Shaw caught for the local club last year. He is young and large and ambitious. He is rarely endowed as to physique, and at college played football. Therefore he is prepared to take bumps behind the plate.

Ross is a slender six-footer, who in pitching equipment was promising last Spring and was turned over to the Richmond team of the International League. He did well there until appendicitis sapped his strength, but since he was discharged from the hospital he has grown heavier. Tim Hendryx is eager for any military drilling that may be ordered. He is right at home with a gun, he says, as he formerly was a member of the Florida National Guard.

Three more Yankees flitted into Macon this evening, all battery men, bringing the total now enrolled at the camp up to seven. The last arrivals were Urban Shocker, Slim Love, and Walter Alexander.

READY FOR HOCKEY FINALS.

Crescents and Irish-Americans to Meet Two Boston Teams.

The final round in the Amateur Hockey League between the Crescent A. C. and Irish-American A. C. sevens of New York and the Arena Hockey Club and Boston A. A. teams of Boston will begin this week. These teams were the winners in the sectional races which were finished last week. The Crescent team of Brooklyn had no trouble in winning among the local sevens, but seems sure to find stiffer opposition in the Boston teams. At St. Nicholas Rink on Tuesday night the first game of the decisive series, which will be a double round robin, will be played between the Crescents and the Irish-American teams, while in Boston on Wednesday night the Arena and Boston A. A. sevens will clash.

The records of the Amateur Hockey League teams to date are as follows:

New York Division—Crescent A. C., won 5, lost 1; Irish-American A. C., won 3, lost 3; Hockey Club of New York, won 2, lost 4; St. Nicholas S. C., won 2, lost 4.

Boston Division—Arena H. C., won 5, lost 2; Boston A. A., won 4, lost 3; Boston H. C., won 1, lost 5.

The schedule of the final round is as follows:

Feb. 27—Crescent A. C. vs. Irish-American A. C., at New York; Feb. 28—Arena H. C. vs. Boston A. A., at Boston; March 3—Irish-American A. C. vs. Arena H. C., at Boston; March 3—Boston A. A. vs. Crescent A. C., at New York; March 10—Arena H. C. vs. Crescent A. C., at New York; March 10—Irish-American A. C. vs. Boston A. A., at Boston; March 14—Crescent A. C. vs. Irish-American A. C., at New York; March 14—Arena H. C. vs. Boston A. A., at Boston; March 17—Irish-American A. C. vs. Arena H. C., at Boston; March 17—Boston A. A. vs. Crescent A. C., at Boston; March 24—Crescent A. C. vs. Arena H. C., at Boston; March 24—Irish-American A. C. vs. Boston A. A., at New York.

BURNS WINS FOUR TROPHIES

New York A. C. Nimrod Has Big Day at Travers Island Traps.

Perfect weather conditions were responsible partly for excellent scores at the Travers Island traps of the New York Athletic Club yesterday. The best shooting of the afternoon was done by A. L. Burns, who won the high scratch event with a card of 95 out of a possible 100 targets. He also annexed the Travers Island Trophy with a straight card of 25, and turned the same trick in the shoot for the Accumulation Cup. In the latter shoot F. A. Baker also had a straight score.

Burns also took home the Tournament Cup, although he did not win a leg yesterday. He had won enough during the earlier Sundays of the month to give him the prize. Yesterday R. M. Owen and J. H. Vanderveer each ran straight scores in the event.

The scores:

A Great Dog Show.

The forty-first annual show of the Westminster Kennel Club, which entertained lovers of dogs last week, marked another forward step in the triumphal march of the terrier. For the third year in succession a wire-haired fox terrier, with all due solemnity, was crowned king over nearly 2,000 canine aristocrats that came from all parts of the country in search of national honors. Among those defeated by Mrs. Roy A. Rainey's Wycollar Boy in the final test or relegated to the ranks of also rans by earlier decisions were two previous champions, the magnificent old English sheepdog Slumber and Strathtay Prince Albert, the English bulldog that took the town by storm when he made his first appearance at the Westminster Show four years ago.

That a terrier again has been selected as the best dog of any breed counts for little in the estimation of the fancy. It is almost an axiom among good judges that "comparisons are odious" when dogs of different breeds are grouped. In judging any one breed there is a standard which guides the adjudicator, but when the various winners are collected and judged in the much-abused unclassified special classes there is little chance to discriminate between the outstanding dogs of each breed. The main thing proved by the recent show is that all kinds of terriers are steadily increasing in popular favor. The Boston terrier, a distinctly American breed, led in number of entries, and there was an all-around improvement in Airedales and fox terriers. Perhaps the greatest improvement was shown in the type of Sealyhams exhibited, and the general strength of this dog from the Welsh border was remarkable in view of the fact that the breed has only been on exhibition in this country for a few years.

That there has been no advance in the quality of English bulldogs was demonstrated by the victory of Strathtay Prince Albert, who has been the leader of these pugnacious animals for four years. In numbers also the bulldogs fell away from the record of previous shows. Collies could scarcely be compared with those shown in former years, and there was not a collie competing for ribbons that compared with Southport Sample, which was benched for exhibition. There was some surprise over the fact that the Pomeranians took the lead so far as numbers shown over the Pekingese, which recently has been the most popular of the toy varieties. The explanation of this is that all is not peaceful in the Pekingese family, and in consequence several of the large exhibitors were absent. Even the best dog in the recent specialty show of this breed was absent from the national fixture, so that it is hard to determine which is really the best of this breed. Field dogs were well represented, and Mary Montrose, a pointer owned by William Ziegler, was credited with a unique performance, as she supplemented many notable victories in field trials by going through her classes without a defeat.

The Baseball Recruits.

The big moment in the life of the recruit ball player has arrived. Every youngster who ever broke into a minor league looks forward to the day when he will be taken on a Southern training trip by a major league club. Whether he makes good or not, the "busher" looks upon the trip as the greatest honor which can be bestowed upon him. A score of these elated youngsters went south last week with the Giants and the Yankees.

Each Spring a large number of young players are tried out by the major league clubs, but only a small percentage of them are retained. They have a hard task to work themselves into a place with the players who have had years of experience in the big leagues. A youth must have exceptional ability to make good. Often, as is the case with the young pitchers, it takes seasons of the proper kind of coaching before a recruit is ready for the major leagues. A notable example of this is Schupp, the Giants' young left hander, who last season, after three years on the bench, under the watchful eye of McGraw, suddenly blossomed into a great boxman.

Both New York teams this season are especially fortunate in having rounded up several promising young pitchers, but out of the big batch it is doubtful if more than two or three of them measure up to major league requirements. It isn't that the rookies haven't the curves the speed, and the strength to stand the test, but it is experience they lack. No matter how good their natural talent, they must have this experience and know all the peculiarities of the tricky batsmen. Some acquire it quicker than others. It takes a long time for a coach to drill into the head of a young pitcher the importance of pitching to a batter's weakness. Control comes only through experience, and few youngsters get it until they have had seasons of patient, tireless work.

Thus, many of the high hopes which have soared southward are sure to be blasted. Youths who started out bubbling over with ambition will have to become reconciled to disappointment. The success they expected to come this season may not come until next season, the season after, or perhaps not at all. The Giants have several youngsters who have shown great promise, including "Pie" Way, the former Yale star; George Smith, the Columbia youth, who was one of the best college boxmen of recent years; Waite Hoyt, a sensation as a high school product, and Stryker, who found it not difficult at all to pitch no-hit games against semi-professional nines at Jersey Summer resorts. But it is a far different story when these lads begin to pitch against major league sluggers with years of experience.

With the Yankees, also, there are several recruit pitchers who will go through the molding process under the veteran Duke Farrell, who has been developing youthful pitching aspirants for twenty years. In the Yankee collection is one Bob McGraw, who as a collegian at the University of Colorado was unbeatable. For two seasons a score of big league scouts have been trying to snare this youth into the major leagues, but he has waited until this chance to break in with New York. Young McGraw, like many of the others, has everything a pitcher should have except experience. If he shows the same coolness and control against the big league batsmen as he did against the college batsmen, the Yankees will have made a valuable acquisition. Enright, Ferguson, Piercy, and Ross are other youngsters who have yet to show what they can do under major league fire.

One thing is certain—if all the young pitchers which the two New York clubs have taken South this Spring come up to the expectations of the men who recommended them, the Giants and the Yankees will have both pennants in hand from the very start of the season.

Pell's Consummate Playing.

Doubtless nothing was more indelibly impressed upon those who witnessed the play for the national racquets championship at the Racquet and Tennis Club last week than the fact that in singles, at any rate, Clarence C. Pell and Stanley G. Mortimer, both of Tuxedo, are head and shoulders above all other contenders, and that for the present Pell has soared to heights which are unattainable even to his clubmate. Both of these men came through to the final round of the singles championship without having encountered opposition that was in the least formidable, and then in the final round Pell asserted his supremacy so brilliantly and so decisively that Mortimer was made to appear almost like a novice at the sport. Pell is now the singles champion, a title, however, which is not new to him, for he held the championship before it was wrested from him by Mortimer. By this victory of Saturday Pell placed the crowning achievement on a season of pronounced success. It was not long ago that this indomitable player secured the honors in the Gold Racquet Tournament at Tuxedo, and, with Mortimer as his partner, was runner-up for the doubles championship.

In all the season, however, it is doubtful if Pell ever attained the supreme heights of play to which he mounted in the final round match against Mortimer on Saturday. Racquets, as few other games, calls for keenness of eye, fortitude, agility. All of these attributes Pell brought into the contest against his rival, and each one seemed to be carried to the Nth power. During the last two games Mortimer could not begin to approach the skill of his antagonist. Pell sent the leather-covered sphere flying around the court, propelled by a swift, sure stroking that made it seem at times nothing more than a white streak trying to escape from the slate-walled court. Mortimer had hardly time for a first thought, let alone a second, before he was called upon to play racquet against ball; that he often failed even to touch the elusive sphere serves only to emphasize the pronounced ability that was with Pell.

Pell is not invincible. Invincibility would be too much to expect in a game which calls for such co-ordination of faculties as does racquets, but this may be said—that whenever Pell plays as he did Saturday he will win, and that the margin of his victory should be scarcely less than that by which he humbled Mortimer.

Is Par Following Bogey?

The revered Colonel Bogey having long since passed out of the ken of the Golf Committees that draw up the score cards of the various links in this section of the country, the wrathful players are now turning their efforts toward dislodging Par from the unyielding position it holds on the tee boxes, score cards, and other accessories before and after the fact of a round of the links at a metropolitan club. John G. Anderson, a good player and a good student of the game, thinks that the livelier ball demands a lowering of the par value of the distance that separates the tee from the green. The late Colonel Bogey came to an untimely end because he degenerated into what is commonly known as "an easy mark." A golfer of not much more than ordinary calibre was able to indulge in a battle with the mythical Colonel and come out at least even at the end of the afternoon. The question that agitates the mind of the golfers at the present moment is whether the low handicap amateurs and the leading professionals are now putting Par in the same unenvied position.

In brief, it is felt that par golf should be perfect golf, and where a great many players in a single afternoon return cards that are better than what the score card labels perfection, there is much food for thought and matter for reflection. Given a baker's dozen of hard-hitting professionals, a course that has been dried out by the sun, a lively ball, and a helping wind on the long holes, and the par on a great many courses will be battered into insensibility in short order. Minikahda score cards have never recovered from the shocks they sustained last June at the time of the national open championship. The par figures for four rounds of the links are 288 strokes, yet Chick Evans completed the 72-hole journey in 286. Not one perfect round, but four rounds in two strokes less than perfection! This is too, too much. John G. Anderson has started something that needs finishing.

Australian Shows Progress of His Training for Dillon Bout.

Les Darcy, the Australian middleweight champion, who will make his first American ring appearance against Jack Dillon, at Madison Square Garden, on March 5, played host to about a dozen friends and newspapermen, at Grant Hugh Browne's Browneleigh Park estate, at Goshen, N. Y., yesterday afternoon. The general prediction, as the Australian completed his exercises, was that he will make it extremely interesting for his opponent from Indianapolis.

It was the first public workout the Australian has given since his arrival in this country several months ago, and he showed up well. He looked to be in good shape, and demonstrated the result of his short period of training for the Dillon bout. His footwork was a revelation, and he used his arms with unusual speed.

Darcy boxed six rounds, three with Wild Burt Kenny, a Bronx heavyweight, and the same number with Jack Sims. In these workouts the Australian showed enough ability to warrant the opinion that Dillon will have a hard time gaining the honors in their ten-round encounter. Darcy also skipped the rope, punched the bag, and indulged in various forms of setting-up exercises for about one hour.

MISS BJURSTEDT IS TO PLAY ON COAST

Tennis Champion Will Accompany Eastern Team and Meet Trio of Stars.

Miss Molla Bjurstedt, holder of the women's national lawn tennis championship, has decided to go to California with the Eastern team which will compete in the East vs. West matches at Los Angeles, beginning March 7. She will play in a series of round robin matches against Mrs. Thomas Bundy—who as May Sutton won the women's national championship, as well as the British title—Miss Mary Browne, three times holder of the title, and Miss Florence Sutton. Miss Bjurstedt will also take part in a mixed doubles match, teaming with George M. Church, third ranking player of the country, who, with Harold Throckmorton, is returning from a trip to the Far East, where he won the championship of the Orient at Manila.

The decision of Miss Bjurstedt to accept the invitation to compete in California will probably cause her to forego defending her title in the women's national indoor championship, which is to begin at the Seventh Regiment Armory on March 23. Miss Bjurstedt has won this tournament for the last two years, and each time without being hard pressed by any rival.

Aside from Church and Throckmorton, the other members of the Eastern team are Frederick B. Alexander, Theodore R. Pell, and Bernon S. Prentice of New York, and Conrad B. Doyle of Washington. Prentice has been in California for some time. Julian S. Myrick, President of the West Side Tennis Club, who has charge of the Eastern arrangements, learned yesterday that Doyle planned to leave for the coast tomorrow, but an effort will be made to induce him to wait for Alexander and Pell, who are to start within a few days. The Washington player is said to be in especially good form for the intersectional series, having played considerable tennis recently on the cement court at the Columbia Country Club.

CORDIER AND COREY WIN.

Both Players Advance in Yale Club Squash Title Play.

A. J. Cordier, holder of the Yale Club squash tennis championship, played his first match in this year's title event there yesterday afternoon, when he opposed H. R. Stern. The title holder experienced little difficulty in winning his way to a second-round bracket, the score being 15—8, 15—4.

The only other match in the championship division brought Alan Corey, the national Class B title holder, into action. In his first-round encounter he vanquished J. F. O'Rourke, at 15—0, 15—5.

GERMAN FREEDOM OF THE SEAS.

We have heard a great deal of the injustice to neutrals in the British Orders in Council, but the contrast between the effect on neutral ships of the British blockade and the German shown in the torpedoing by German submarines of seven Dutch ships in one day is worth considering. These vessels, carrying no contraband, four eastward bound for Holland, laden chiefly with foodstuffs for Dutch consumption, three in ballast steaming westward, had been taken into the English port of Falmouth, examined, and sent on their way. It was the firm belief of their skippers that they had been assured a safe conduct by Germany. The westward bound ships were presumably in the so-called safety lane between Falmouth and the United States. Because an agreement had been made with Germany that the ships might sail with "reasonable assurance of safety," the British authorities were not consulted as to the proper precautions to take. Yet German submarines torpedoed all seven, sinking three and damaging the others so badly that their crews deserted them. And this with only five minutes' warning.

The contrast between German and English blockade methods could have had no more striking illustration. It is well to bear in mind that the ships sunk by Germany are always unarmed merchantmen. The Kaiser's submarines keep clear of the British Navy and avoid armed vessels. They are not seeking combat, but ruthless destruction. It has been said, in fancied extenuation of these attacks, that the use of the undersea boat is a new mode of warfare. The instrument is new, but the kind of warfare in which the Germans use it is precisely that employed by savages since the dawn of history.

OLEOMARGARINE.

An amendment to the Revenue bill proposes to reduce the 10-cent tax on oleomargarine to 2 cents in order both to find funds for the Treasury and to reduce the cost of living, for the poor particularly. The action proposed is better than the reason for it. The Treasury has repeatedly advised that action like that proposed should be taken without regard to the present condition of either the Treasury or the trade. It should be done, no doubt, but it ought not to be pretended that it will assist the Treasury or reduce the cost of living to any extent worth mentioning. The true reason for revising the tax is that it was enacted on false pretenses and has failed in its intent. The repeal is now urged in the same manner as the enactment was. It is not sure that the reduction of the 10-cent tax will help the Treasury, because at the same time the one-quarter-cent tax is raised to 2 cents. The 10-cent tax is collected on so small an amount of oleomargarine and the one-quarter-cent tax is collected on such a great amount that the increase of the tax may exceed the decrease and make the poor man's make-believe dearer. It is not possible to be positive about it, because the frauds in evasion of the 10-cent tax are beyond estimate.

The poor man is peculiarly sensitive about eating white butter, and so he buys tinted oleo under the name of butter. In most years the prosecutions for this mean fraud run above a thousand. Nobody knows how much undetected fraud exists, and so nobody can be sure about the tax receipts or the pretense that the legislation is for the poor man's benefit. The prospect is that he must eat oleo as oleo, if he eats it at all. He will hate to do that. He perhaps would rather pay the price of butter for oleo.

This tax wrangle is a "joker," like so many others. The real contest is between the farmers and the packers. The farmers are the Dairy Trust. The packers are the Beef Trust. Congress is in danger of being deceived in the repeal of the law, as it was in the enactment of it. The talk about cheapening either the poor man's butter or oleo is subject to discount with impartiality. All taxation for other purposes than revenue is suspect.

A SENSIBLE REFLECTION.

Senator WILLIAMS of Mississippi spoke manfully and to the point in Saturday's heated debate. The harsh judgment of the President, on whose shoulders rests such a burden of responsibility as no other American of these times has been forced to bear, as few statesmen of any age have borne, had gone too far. JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS protested in his vigorous and telling way. He rallied his associates on their tendency to futile debate and insistence upon formalities in a dangerous crisis. Of the appeal of private shippers for guns to arm their ships he said, (we quote from THE TIMES Washington correspondent):

> "If I, as I fortunately am not, were "President, I would give them the "guns and gunners."
> "I wish to GOD that the Senator were President," interrupted Mr. SUTHERLAND of Utah, "so that might be done."
> "I am very glad that I am not," replied Mr. WILLIAMS, "because I have "seen the President do so many things "more wisely than I would have done "them."

A sensible reflection that many impulsive American citizens in and out of Congress may well take into consideration. Not that the President is on trial, for he is not. He is the Chief Executive of the whole nation, and the nation applauds him, admires his firmness amid the clamor of dissent, believes that he is its safest guide. He has, indeed, done many things more wisely than most of his opponents would have done them.

A HEADLESS TRUNK.

The Republican Party has no leaders; it has no head; it has become simply a trunk. At this historic moment it does not know where it is going or what it wants to do. When the historic moment is over, the Republican Party will have no record; it will not have done anything to which it can point. The course of a party in opposition is usually to make a record which will stand out, so that the country will turn to it if it grows tired of the party in power. That course has always been followed, except in the darkest days of the Democratic stupor that followed BRYAN's second defeat. The Republican Party, however, is making no record, because it has neither principles nor leaders.

At this moment the Republican Party in Congress, if it had leaders, could make a mark that would be remembered. It could speak the voice of Americanism; it could take advantage of the opportunities which the Kitchinish leadership of the Democratic Party is rapidly despoiling that party of. The party in opposition usually seeks to profit by the mistakes of the majority party. In the present Congress the Democratic leadership does not speak the voice of the American people. It takes the half-Socialist theories of pacifism which have spread through some parts of the country to be the controlling influence on American minds, and acts accordingly, and in so doing it mistakes the American mind. If the Republican Party had leaders, they would seize on the advantage so offered them and align the opposition party as an American party. Thereby they would not only play their country's game, but their party's, and they would afford a reason, the only conceivable reason, why they should be intrusted with power if the country should become disgusted with the Stone-led, Kitchin-guided Democratic Party.

Instead, they play the hand of the Kitchin-guided Democratic Party; they seek to outdo the Kitchinites in their devotion to the cause of surrender. If they represented the spirit of the Republicans of the nation in this, they might be excused, but they do not. To convince one's self that they do not, one has only to imagine that BLAINE, EDMUNDS, INGALLS, HOAR, REED, and SHERMAN were still in the place of Republican leadership in Congress and were devoting themselves to the task of shaping American public opinion and directing Republican energies. Can any one doubt that a single speech by one of these men would arouse such a response from Republicans, at least, the whole country over, as to make it absurd to ask whether they represented the spirit of the party and the nation too? Can any one imagine any one of these real leaders of thirty years ago, when the Republican Party had leaders, taking his cue from Democrats and trying to outmatch them? If such a thing can be imagined, can any one imagine them, having taken such a meek position, not even trying to lead their party after them into the slough, but confining themselves to talk?

THE MEXICAN CONSTITUTION.

In his speech at Queretaro, when the revised Constitution of Mexico was ratified, LUIS MANUEL ROJAS, President of the Constitutional Assembly, declared that the object of the revision was "to better the con-"dition of the popular classes, which "had always been oppressed," and he admitted that defects might later be discovered in the instrument. The proclaimed object is admirable. To relieve the humble from oppression is noble, but an organic law which, while striving to benefit the many, works rank injustice to the few must be radically defective. If the new provision of the Mexican Constitution which compels foreigners permitted to hold titles to lands to discard their treaty rights, to refrain from appealing to their Governments for aid if their lands are taken from them, is to apply to those thousands of foreigners who have in the past invested many millions in Mexican lands, it is grossly unjust, and will lead to international complications. If it is to be applied only to the future purchases of land by foreigners, it is nevertheless unwise and will tend to retard the normal development of Mexico.

Many other provisions of this raw document suggest that the Mexican idea of freedom is confused with intolerance. For instance, the revision of the rigid rules governing churches forbids the performance of clerical duties by all except born Mexicans. The priests born in Spain must go, and so must the Protestant ministers of English or American birth. Ministers may not, in public or private, criticise the Government or its laws, and they are deprived of the right to vote. No clergyman, Catholic or Protestant, will be permitted to teach in any public school. The regulation of labor includes an eight-hour day and a minimum wage, as might have been expected, and is radical in all respects. But it is only in its provisions touching the rights of foreigners who have just claims in Mexico that the Constitution is open to question by foreigners.

ONE LINCOLN FABLE.

WASHINGTON was spoiled for us by well-meaning mythmakers who were afraid we would not admire him enough, and so built up a legend of a godlike man almost without body, parts, or passions. The well-meaning busybodies are at work on LINCOLN now, and if they have their way will conceal the real man behind an imaginary character; and this myth will be much worse than the Washington myth, for the tendency is to make LINCOLN a benevolent cipher, too full of kindness to have any room left for common sense. Therefore LINCOLN's true friends will be grateful to General JULIAN S. CARR, a well-known ex-Confederate soldier of Durham, N. C., for the complete and unanswerable way in which he has disposed of one of the most noxiously persistent of the stories which go to make up the Lincoln myth.

This is the story that at the Hampton Roads Conference LINCOLN said to the head of the Confederate Peace Commission, ALEXANDER H. STEPHENS, "STEPHENS, let me write 'Union' at "the top of this page, and you may "fill up the paper as you please," but that this generous offer to let the beaten Confederacy dictate the terms of peace was unaccountably rejected. General CARR has assembled all the evidence on this hitherto indestructible myth, and, while it would be too much to hope that he has killed it, he has at least left no excuse for reasonable men to believe in it longer.

In a pamphlet published by him General CARR shows that President DAVIS, in appointing STEPHENS, CAMPBELL, and HUNTER as Peace Commissioners, trammeled them with no instructions. LINCOLN, however, instructed his Commissioner, SEWARD, that no terms would be discussed that did not include "the restoration of the national authority," emancipation of the slaves, and the disbandment of the Southern armies. No records were taken of the conference, but, as General CARR points out, > every member of the conference—the only ones who could possibly know—has written and printed and given to the public each his own account of what did occur. And every one of these accounts agree.

He first quotes LINCOLN's account, given in a message to the House on Feb. 10, 1865, in which, after quoting the instructions to SEWARD already cited, the President said:

> On my part the whole substance of the instructions to the Secretary of State, hereinbefore recited, was stated and insisted upon, and nothing was said inconsistent therewith.

SEWARD's account in a letter to CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, Feb. 7, 1865, (four days after the conference,) says that the President announced that he would agree to nothing that did not have as a basis the disbandment of the Southern forces and restoration of the Union, and adds:

> The President announced that he must not be expected to depart from the positions he had heretofore assumed in his Proclamation of Emancipation.

The report of STEPHENS, CAMPBELL, and HUNTER to President DAVIS was dated Feb. 5, 1865, two days after the conference. They say that LINCOLN informed them that he would entertain "no terms or proposals of any treaty or "agreement," because that would be a recognition of the Confederacy; that he would grant no truce or armistice unless assured of the complete restoration of national authority, and "that whatever consequences may "follow from the re-establishment of "that authority must be accepted," although he would be lenient. He also called their attention to the fact that Congress had passed a Constitutional amendment abolishing slavery.

If LINCOLN really offered to admit the South into the Union on the South's own terms, all the five conferees, the only persons present, deliberately suppressed the fact. DAVIS, on receiving the report of his Commissioners, sent a message to the Confederate Congress on Feb. 6, 1865, in which he said:

> The enemy refused * * * to permit us to have peace on any other basis than our unconditional submission to their rule.

The Confederate Senate and House thereupon passed a joint resolution reciting the report of the Commissioners as a report "that no terms, ex-"cept such as the conqueror grants "to the subjugated, would be extend-"ed to the people of these States." General CARR says:

> Mr. STEPHENS was President of the Senate and Mr. HUNTER was a member of it; and we are seriously asked to believe that they sat there and heard this false interpretation of Mr. LINCOLN and the conference, and saw this desperate action of their Congress, without opening their mouths to inform those bodies that they could have Union on their own terms.

It is alleged that LINCOLN may have made the "fill-up-the-paper" suggestion to STEPHENS in an aside, which HUNTER and CAMPBELL did not hear; for the latter two have left personal narratives fatal to any theory that anything of the kind happened in their hearing. This, however, only places the whole ignominy on STEPHENS's shoulders; for, if true, one is required to believe that for some incomprehensible motive he concealed LINCOLN's momentous offer from his colleagues and from DAVIS, with whom they had a long conversation in which, as he says, "We reported to him ver-"bally all that had occurred at the "conference." STEPHENS was an honorable man, not a villain.

What General CARR does not mention is that if LINCOLN, in a fit of mushy emotionalism, had made any such gorgeous offer to the Confederate Commissioners, he would have been committing treason to common sense, the logic of the war situation, and the people of the North.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Can War Be Endured Without Tea? Among the restrictions on imports that were announced by the British Premier as essential to the safety of the empire was one that must have impressed his hearers rather more than did most of the others, as indicating the gravity of the submarine peril. Probably none of these others meant to so nearly every Briton a daily personal deprivation as does—or rather as would—the shutting off of the tea supply other than Indian tea.

Though tea may not count as a necessity of life, it is not much different from one for those who have become accustomed to its use, and it is the practically unanimous testimony of men who, as explorers or otherwise, are forced to make great expenditures of energy under rigorous conditions that tea is a most important addition to their fare. They willingly take the trouble to carry it with them on journeys where every added ounce of burden receives careful consideration and all "luxuries" are left behind. Of course the great majority of human kind managed to get along well enough until comparatively recent years without this narcotic, or any of its near relatives, but the welcome it everywhere received when once known shows plainly enough that it met a want that is not the less real because not easy to define.

But the Premier's warning as to tea was not as terrifying to the Britons as it might have been, for the proposed exclusion is to be complete only as regards what he called "foreign" teas, meaning, in effect, those of China, and of those the English have not been great consumers since the raising of the precious herb has become an important industry in several of Great Britain's colonial possessions, notably Ceylon. Even of these "native" teas, however, the imports are to be cut to smaller amounts than have become usual in the regular course of trade, and it is apparent that a good many British teapots will have to be retired from present service.

Thereby will be appreciably increased the gloom of a situation that was already dark enough, and the endurance of the trials of the time will be made measurably harder. Taking everything into account, it is at least probable that Mr. LLOYD GEORGE might better have restricted the manufacture of intoxicants more than he now proposes and let the tea trade alone.

A Battle Among Pacifists. As might have been expected, it was the "lunatic fringe," to use Colonel ROOSEVELT's happily invented phrase, that finally gained control of last week's pacifist convention in this city and took the definite action on which all who attended the meeting will be judged by the rest of the country. Nothing less than a formal declaration that war for any cause was wrong, which is the same thing as saying that peace is worth any price, would satisfy the ruling fraction of the delegates, and the more moderate, or less fanatical, of the men and women present counseled in vain against the adoption of resolutions that would emphasize and justify all that the foes of pacifism had been saying about it.

There is significance, too, though no real cause for surprise, in the fact that the convention was a disorderly one from beginning to end—that these professed worshippers of peace applied to each other epithets as harsh as are ever used at gatherings of unregenerate politicians, and that, if they did not come to blows as a means of settling differences of opinion, it was because the possessors of such common sense and ordinary regard for public opinion as had exemplification there yielded to the inevitable before the ultimate display of inconsistency could be made.

It would be interesting to know what the extreme pacifists would do if confronted with the alternative of fighting, and killing, if they could, a band of hungry wolves, or else of allowing themselves, their wives and children to be eaten up. That contingency differs in no essential degree from that which many a nation has had to meet, with bipeds instead of quadrupeds threatening destruction, and the moral elements in the two cases are precisely the same. In each, indeed, a third course is or might be open—that of running away betimes and leaving the wolves of whatever species masters of the field.

Several races, among them the Eskimos, are said by the ethnologists to have done just that, though their flight into lands nobody else would take as a gift is ascribed to incompetence for war rather than a lofty disapproval of it. Wolves would have the same rights in any frontier village, and the same plea of "necessity," that the Germans had in Belgium, and, if no war is defensible, to make against wolves the only sort of resistance they understand would be wicked.

Legislators Surely Are Busy! A list of the bills passed by the present session of our Legislature and signed by the Governor is printed in The Law Journal. It is a truly impressive showing, and one calculated to make the reader wonder how the minds of these statesmen stand the constant and varied strains to which they are subjected.

Prominent among the achievements on the record is "an Act"—well deserving the capital letter it receives—"to incorporate the Mazeppa Fire Engine Company, No. 2, of Nyack, Orangetown, Rockland County, State of New York," and settling the momentous question of how many men may join it. Another "Act" gives the Surrogate in Westchester County an additional clerk, and a third allows Onondaga County to have an Auditor and tells him how to audit and what, while a fourth amends the charter of the village of Fredonia. Westchester County, too, graciously has been empowered to borrow some money and to erect some public buildings in which to house its paupers and criminals.

So the annals of this great lawmaking body run on. To the uninitiate by far the greater part of what it does would seem to be work which the several counties and towns were, or ought to be, quite competent to do for themselves without any outside advice or assistance, but, of course, that cannot be true. In some real, though mysterious, way it must be that the establishment in Nyack of a Mazeppa Fire Company, No. 2, cannot be safely or well done unless Chautauqua and Richmond Counties, and all the counties in between, have a voice in the matter.

If not thus controlled and restrained Nyack might go on creating Mazeppa Fire Companies in endless succession and fall into hopeless bankruptcy as a result of its mad passion for this form of municipal activity.

FOR A NONPARTISAN CABINET

The Situation Held to Justify a Departure from Custom.

St. Louis, Feb. 22, 1917.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Facing the gravest calamities that have ever threatened the United States, the eventuality of which none can foresee, the thoughts of all turn instinctively to our country. It is not a time for division, racial or political, but for union in one common and indivisible Americanism.

This nation is made up of a hundred million of patriotic citizens, among whom many are deservedly distinguished for peculiar and valuable talents. Many are possessed of profound wisdom and ripe experience in statecraft, in science, in finance, in law, in transportation, in industry, and in the arts of war as well. There is perhaps no greater reservoir of abilities in any country on earth upon which a Government in need may draw. In days so ominous as these it seems not only appropriate but actually necessary that these talents be employed to the full in the ways and places calculated to bring their greatest benefits to the nation. There is an undeniable feeling abroad in the land of a portentous deficiency in authoritative councils of the nation. Whether justified or not, such a suspicion is fixed firmly in the public mind, and the President is envisaged as staggering under such a burden as only Washington and Lincoln have borne before, but alone and unaided. There is no Hamilton, Jefferson, or Randolph, no Seward, Stanton, or Chase to whom a part of the burden may be shifted.

Yet the supreme sacrifices are to be made by the people. Are they not, therefore, entitled to feel that the abilities of men the equal of Washington's and Lincoln's counselors will be used? Are they not entitled actually to insist that the ablest and wisest men in our public life be drafted into their service—not after war is upon us, but now—in the face of impending calamity? Is there not a responsibility upon the President himself to the American people beyond the mere rendering of his own best services?

There is a highly important reason why President Wilson should at once set about to form an American Cabinet of known ability. It is not merely that he shall have adequate counsel and cooperation but there is an opinion among the belligerents that we are a nation of divided loyalty; that such division follows political as well as racial lines. We deny it as false, yet it none the less constitutes an element of weakness in our foreign relations amounting actually to a danger.

An American Cabinet, whether nonpartisan or coalition, will settle the matter definitely and finally. Such a Cabinet, using the best talents of the United States, without regard to party, would mean a union of responsibility upon representatives of a united people. It is a sound recourse of every popular Government in times of grave danger, in which the abilities of the nation truly manifest themselves in heroic public service

On March 4 next the tenure of the present Cabinet will expire. It is up to the President to appreciate the momentous demands of the occasion.

STERLING E. EDMUNDS.

TO RUDYARD KIPLING—TODAY.

In the 'Nineties you awoke us with your ringing, swinging song,
When you set our youth a-dreaming golden dreams of gallant deeds—
When you won your heady laurels and you swept the World along
With your realistic stories and your sturdy modern creeds.
We read you and we worshipped you with laughter and with joy—
Your Soldiers Three, your Maltese Cat, your dreaming Brushwood Boy!

You sang of British Tommy—made us laugh and made us cry—
You sang a song of Derelicts, you sang of Seven Seas:
You sang delicious nonsense, little songs that you or I
Could murmur in the gloaming to the kiddy on our knees:
You thrilled us by your daring, by your vision, by your youth,
And now and then you struck the chord of God's eternal Truth!

Right down the years you rode your steed—and Pegasus was he!
Right well you rode and far you rode . . . but Youth may never stay . . .
And so you faced disaster and you faced it gallantly,
For out of it your genius wrought the loveliness of "They,"
And every father who has wrought and every lover too
Doth owe a debt, perchance unpaid . . . I pay mine now to you!

In later years the sad old World has come at last to This . . .
To War and Death . . . the sacrifice of "all we have and are. . . ."
In other days you struck your note of jarring emphasis,
The grim, relentless Truth you told . . . it echoed wide and far;
But if today you sing no song, yours still "the true romance,"
Yours still the greatest gift there be . . . to England, Belgium, France,

You've staked your all, whate'er befall, the great war lost or won,
For once you gave your land a song . . . but now you give your son.

ELIZABETH NEWPORT HEPBURN.

CHILD LABOR BOARD ASKS AID OF STATES

New Federal Body Writes to 48 Governors Suggesting Co-operative Method.

PROVIDED FOR BY THE LAW

Cabinet Officers Express Desire to Get Greatest Benefit from Act, Without Hardships.

The three Cabinet officers constituting the Federal Child Labor Board under the new law have sent a letter to each of the forty-eight Governors of States inviting their co-operation to make it easy for business interests and workers to get the most benefit from the act, which becomes operative Sept. 1. The Cabinet officers on the board are Attorney General Thomas W. Gregory, Secretary William C. Redfield of the Department of Commerce, and Secretary W. B. Wilson of the Department of Labor. In transmitting the letter, as executive under the law, Secretary Wilson made the following statement:

"The purpose of the board's letter to the Governors is, I believe, obvious. It is an effort to make plain the desire of the Federal Board to consider the interests of the States, the business world, and the workers whom the law may affect. The board hopes that, when the law goes into effect on Sept. 1 next, regulations may be ready that shall help, not hinder, legitimate interests. The law permits the board to accept the certificates of States which it approves, and the board is endeavoring to provide a way to avoid the inconvenience and expense of two certificates, one issued by the State and one by the board.

"The board has suggested that the States having legislative sessions empower a State board or appropriate State official, in a manner similar to the board provided for under the Federal Child Labor act, to make State regulations when our regulations have been determined upon. This method has great advantages. It is flexible. If our board finds some regulation works onerously we can change it, and a similar State board may follow suit. A law is rigid. It could not be changed until another legislative session. But if any State prefers, we have submitted a suggestive outline covering what we think the utmost limit of regulation probable. If a State adopts either plan we feel that they are pretty safe to be designated, and thus we can avoid two employment certificates with all the attendant bother and expense to employers and working children. This we are very anxious to do. We believe all persons concerned, on reflection, will support State administrations in acting with us on this suggestion."

Forty-one State Legislatures are now in session.

MALONE DEFENDS WILSON.

Assails Lodge and Calls President's Critics "Pseudo Americans."

Political, editorial, and other critics of President Wilson were scored yesterday afternoon by Dudley Field Malone, Collector of the Port of New York, in an address on "The Americanism of Washington" at the West Side Y. M. C. A. Senator Lodge came in for individual criticism by the Collector, while others were grouped together under the general classification of "pseudo Americans," "patriotic window decorators," "old flubdubs," and other appellations. He said the President would "hit and hit hard when the hour came."

The Collector drew a parallel between the trouble of Washington with his Congress and the present friction between President Wilson and the legislative branch of the Government. Occasionally he digressed and put in an argument for a more adequate army and navy to defend the country, or to make some explanation of the foreign policy of the President. He concluded by saying that European statesmen and soldiers feel that if they had a leader like the President there would be no war.

5,000 FEWER CASES HEARD.

Special Sessions Report Tells of Facilities in Magistrates' Courts.

Chief Justice Kernochan of Special Sessions, whose report for 1916 has just been put into the hands of Mayor Mitchel, says that there has been a reduction of more than 5,000 cases in that court the last year because of added facilities given to the Magistrates' courts by Chapter 531 of the Laws of 1915. This reduction, the report says, has enabled the Special Sessions court to devote more attention to the important cases which came before it.

A number of improvements in the procedure of the court are reported by the Chief Justice, including the extension of the probation system, the reduction of appearances of police and departmental witnesses by the grouping of cases, the segregation of cases involving minors and the establishment of private hearings in cases where undue notoriety is undesirable. He calls attention to the scarcity of institutions for the mentally defective, and asks for additional facilities in dealing with drug addicts along the lines recommended by Justice Collins of the Special Sessions court.

LEAGUE TO FIGHT FUSION.

Promoters Say 2,000 Business Men Are Enrolled in New Body.

An organization of business men opposed to the present Fusion administration, to be known as "The Business Men's League of the City of New York," was organized Saturday night at the Engineers' Club, 32 West Fortieth Street, for the purpose of taking an active part in the coming municipal campaign. The movement has been going forward quietly for several weeks, and its promoters say that some 2,000 business men of the city have enrolled. Officers have been elected and committees for each borough appointed. The permanent Chairman is Joseph Yeska, clothing manufacturer of 725 Broadway. The Secretary is Webster Oliver of Hogan & Son, iron and steel, of 1,527 Pacific Street, Brooklyn, and the Treasurer is Carl Hoffbauer of Carl Hoffbauer & Co., silk manufacturers, 7 West Twenty-second Street. It was said yesterday that a number of prominent Republicans, including William Berri, proprietor of The Brooklyn Standard Union, which has opposed Mayor Mitchel, were behind the movement.

The committees are made up of thirty-one members from Manhattan, twenty-seven from Brooklyn, seventeen from Queens, fourteen from the Bronx, and five from Richmond.

Commerce Fund for the Belgians.

Subscriptions of all classes to the fund in aid of the work of the Commission for Relief in Belgium on the part of members of the New York Chamber of Commerce amounted to $32,075 up to and including Feb. 23, it was announced yesterday. This includes a subscription of $10,000 by one member and paid direct to the commission, and a $10,000 subscription pledged by the Chamber from its special fund. Besides this there are pledges to date of $740 a month.

PREPAREDNESS SAVED SWISS

E. Alexander Powell Quotes a German General to That Effect.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—At the request of the Advisory Commission of the Council for National Defense, E. Alexander Powell, author and war correspondent, spoke here tonight at Continental Memorial Hall on the military lessons of the war, and advocated universal military service for the United States. The lecture was delivered in connection with the exhibition of 7,000 feet of film taken by military photographers under the direction of the General Staff of the French Army and loaned to Mr. Powell by the French Government. The audience was composed of prominent Government officials, army and navy officers, and diplomats.

"A member of the House of Representatives told me yesterday," said Mr. Powell, "that he would commit political suicide were he to vote for universal service at this time. 'To vote against it will be wholesale murder the first time you have to send our untrained boys out to defend you from the trained and schooled invader,' I replied.

"The great war began the first of August, 1914; it was the first of the following May before the first battalions of Kitchener's army were landed in France. Even then the officers, and there were none braver, did not know their business. As a result of her lack of trained officers, England lost tens of thousands of lives

"The commander of one of the German Armies told me in September, 1914, that the chief reason which impelled the German General Staff to select the route through Belgium instead of going through Switzerland was because the Belgians were wholly unprepared for war, whereas in Switzerland every man was a trained soldier."

ASK EFFECTIVE AGREEMENT.

Publishers to Give Views Today on Newsprint Offer.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Newspaper publishers invited here from throughout the United States will give the Federal Trade Commission their views tomorrow on the proposal by newsprint paper manufacturers that the commission fix prices for their product. Consent of the publishers generally is awaited before the commission will agree to arbitrate differences between the paper makers and the publishers.

Officers of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, who have been here for several days, have indicated they will approve the proposal if it promises, in addition to lower prices, a restoration of free competition in newsprint manufacture. Before indorsing it, however, they want the proposal signed by manufacturers representing at least 50 per cent. of the newsprint tonnage, and also want the signatures of all members of the Executive Committee of the Newsprint Manufacturers' Association.

Publishers arriving tonight comprise largely those who have purchased their paper from manufacturers who joined in the price-fixing suggestion. It is generally believed the publishers will approve the plan, and that the Trade Commission within a few days will announce acceptance of the manufacturers' suggestion.

WORK FOR GUARDSMEN.

Federal Bureau to Help Find Jobs for Troops Leaving.

Special to The New York Times.

McALLEN, Txeas, Feb. 25.—The Sixty-ninth New York Infantry left here tonight for Washington by way of Houston, Kansas City, Springfield, and Cincinnati, under command of Colonel Haskell. The Twelfth New York Infantry will leave here Monday night by way of Houston, St. Louis, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Washington, under command of Lieut. Col. Foster. The Twelfth is to be honor guard to the President at the inaugural ceremonies.

Plans to aid returning National Guardsmen in obtaining employment have been set on foot by A. S. Morrison, Acting Chief of the Federal Bureau of Employment, who has been directed to extend this aid by order of Commissioner of Immigration Caminetti, the head of the National Bureau in Washington. The local office of the bureau is in the Barge Office, at the Battery.

On file in the New York office are the names of hundreds of employers and firms anxious to obtain reliable help. Practically all of the railroads, it is stated, are in need of men; the steel companies need mechanics, various other industries can care for skilled as well as unskilled men, while the Government wants trustworthy men for guard duty at arsenals and other important places.

HEAVY TAX ON OIL EXPORTS.

Mexico Outlines Decree for Levies Based on Specific Gravity.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 25.—Decided increases in the export duties on crude oil and its products are provided for in a decree outlined by the Department of Fomento and now awaiting the signature of General Carranza.

According to the decree, oil of a higher specific gravity than .94 will be taxed 80 centavos a ton, and lighter oil will pay 10 centavos a ton additional for each degree less than .94. A tax of 5 per cent. on the commercial value will be placed on refined products, which now pay no export tax. The present tax of 60 centavos a ton on crude oil for Mexican consumption is abrogated. A tax of 120 centavos is placed on all oil wasted at new wells or not utilized from flowing wells. The proposed decree is intended to become effective July 1. The present export tax is 60 centavos a ton, without regard to gravity.

It is believed the tax will increase the Government's revenues largely, but oil men say it will make it difficult for Mexican producers to compete with foreign companies on kerosene and gasoline and other derivatives.

WAR WORK FOR WOMEN.

Suffragists Organize Clearing House to Concentrate Activities.

The National American Woman Suffrage Association is to form a National Central Committee to undertake war work if the need arises. This action was taken at a meeting of the organization in Washington attended by Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, Chairman of the New York State Suffrage Party; Mrs. Raymond Brown, and Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw.

"The object of the formation of a Central Committee," Mrs. Whitehouse explained yesterday, "is to act as a clearing house for the Government and other national women's organizations in order that service may be rendered in the most expeditious manner.

"In the way of definite service the Council declared its willingness to undertake work along the line of employment bureaus for women, the training of women for agricultural work, and with a view to avoiding waste, co-operation with the Red Cross as needed, and, finally, a campaign of Americanization."

Plan New Beth Israel Hospital.

The trustees of the Beth Israel Hospital announced yesterday that they would soon erect a new hospital to cost $1,000,000 and to accommodate 500 patients on Livingston Place. The hospital has just acquired the property at 17 Livingston Place, near Seventeenth Street, next to a frontage of 150 feet it already owned, and it is upon this ground that the new institution will be built. The hospital is now located at Jefferson and Cherry Streets.

DR. KEMP ARRAIGNS CALVARY TRUSTEES

Pastor, Who Resigned Because of Fight, Says Board Broke Solemn Pledges.

FRIENDS ASK HIM TO STAY

And Induce Him to Remain Until April, Promising Reorganization of the Trustees.

The controversy which caused the Rev. Joseph W. Kemp and the Rev. David Ross to tender their resignations as pastor and associate pastor respectively of Calvary Baptist Church reached new levels last night after Mr. Kemp, in his farewell sermon, had accused members of the Board of Trustees of having violated pledges made to him at the time he assumed the pastorate. Mr. Kemp said the laws governing the Baptist churches of the city were "unscriptural and unbaptistic," and that few Baptists realized "how far they had placed their necks in the noose."

Notwithstanding the pastor's ire, a committee of friends called on him after the service and induced him to hold his resignation in abeyance until April.

"The members of the Board of Trustees who are opposed to Mr. Kemp will leave the board at the expiration of their terms in April," one of Mr. Kemp's friends said. "All he has to do, therefore, is to submit to conditions until that time, after which he will have a free hand."

Mr. Kemp intimated he knew of what was going on by announcing from the pulpit that "something important" might develop by next Wednesday.

"I do not say that anything will," he said, "but things have a way of developing with mushroom rapidity in this church which is astonishing. If any one had told me nine days ago that the things would happen that have happened in the last week, I would have used strong language in proving that he was wrong.

"Several reasons caused me to tender my resignation, and one of these was a protest against the violation of most solemn pledges by men now serving on the Board of Trustees of this church. And when solemn pledges are broken one never knows what will happen next. I protest against the violation of these pledges and against any law but the law of God governing the church.

"I have been in a peculiar position in this church ever since I became its pastor, and I was never even formally installed, because those who were to be in charge of the ceremony could not agree among themselves. I was told when I came to New York City that this city was the graveyard of ministers. But I do not intend to be buried here. I mean by this that I do not intend to yield any of the principles for which I have stood as a Baptist. I have not attracted crowds to this church, perhaps, but this signifies nothing in New York City, because I do not know of any place on God's earth where there are so many unfilled churches. But while I have been pastor we have attracted souls, and we have made progress."

The trouble between the two pastors and the Board of Trustees grew out of a refusal, it was said, by members of the Board of Trustees to support Mr. Kemp's policies.

"They told me when I became pastor that they would either support me or leave the board," Mr. Kemp explained last night. "But they have done neither. That is why I am leaving."

DR. ELIOT'S BELIEF.

Harvard's President Emeritus Interprets Unitarianism Anew.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Feb. 25.—Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard, has written a new statement of the Unitarian belief, which is to be sent broadcast. Some of the cardinal tenets follow:

"We believe in a loving God who inspires and vivifies the universe, and to that God we attribute in an infinite degree all the finest, noblest, sweetest, loveliest qualities which human nature embodies and displays in finite forms. For us God is not a despotic ruler, a Judge, just or unjust, or a lord of embattled hosts. He is for us a Father Divine; the word rather signifies for us the best human combination of justice, tenderness, and intimate sympathy.

"We recognize that there are great evils in the world, but refuse to accept them as inevitable, and we combat them with every form of intelligent human effort, and with every means which modern science puts into our hands.

"We believe in the prevention of evil by destroying its spawn and digging up its roots, and in educating and reforming the wrongdoer, rather than merely punishing him.

"We recognize that human wills are often weak, and human bodies and minds often defective; but we do not infer thence that the human race is depraved and is to be controlled and redeemed only by fear or terror.

"We believe that mankind would get along better than they do now if it were positively known that the heaven of Revelations had been burned and hell quenched.

"We believe in the lilies of the field, and accept their testimony to the nature of the God that made them so beautiful, and us capable of enjoying them.

"We believe that to whom much is given, of them much is expected or required; and that the sense of obligation is strongest in a grateful conscience."

WHEN A LIE IS NOT WRONG.

Dr. Reisner Tells Congregation When It May Be Right to Use One.

The Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reisner told his congregation, at Grace Methodist Episcopal Church last night, that there may be circumstances under which it is right to lie. He recalled the alleged practice of Colonel Roosevelt of denying his statements if they were revealed through a broken confidence, said European diplomacy was trained in skillful lying, and declared the Jesuits defended all kinds of false statements if the church was advanced thereby. He added that many a man had perjured himself to save the honor of a woman. Dr. Reisner cast no doubt on the cherry tree fable, but expressed confidence that George Washington must have fibbed at times during his boyhood. He condemned selfish lying and said truth is the backbone of nations and individuals.

He also read answers from several persons whose opinions on lying were asked. George S. Ward, President of the Ward Baking Company, said it is right to lie if justified by a good conscience; Martin W. Littleton said a real lie is never right; the Rev. Dr. E. S. Tipple thought there could be no sufficient justification of a lie, and Ogden L. Mills thought George Washington's rule a pretty good one for the average man.

PASTOR GOES WEST.

Henry Frank Accepts Call from San Francisco Independent Church.

Henry Frank, head of the Ethical Religious Society, formerly the Metropolitan Independent Church, announced at the morning service yesterday in Tuxedo Hall, Madison Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, his resignation to accept the pastorate of the new Independent Church of San Francisco.

This congregation is composed of a part of the membership of the First Congregational Church, of which Dr. Charles Aked, one-time pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, was the former pastor. After Dr. Aked's resignation last year the congregation split. It is the seceding faction that Mr. Frank will head. He will go to San Francisco next month.

HIBBEN WANTS WAR WITHOUT WAITING

Princeton Head Says We Should Not Linger Till Driven In to Save Our Commerce.

BRAVE BECAUSE OF BRITAIN

Her Fleet, Between Us and Attack, He Tells Congregation, Gives Us Courage at Present.

John Grier Hibben, who became President of Princeton University when President Woodrow Wilson first entered politics, demanded before an audience of 1,500 persons in a Brooklyn church last night that America should enter the war on the righteous side of the Allies, and not wait until she was driven in solely for the protection of her commerce. President Hibben's declaration, made near the close of an address in which he scored the United States for lack of an international conscience, was received in earnest silence by the congregation of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, which was prevented by the conventions of religious service from rendering applause.

"We are under solemn obligations as Christians and as citizens to do whatever is in our power to preserve the peace," he began, "but we are also under a more solemn obligation to defend what is right. It is not peace alone that we have to consider, but peace and righteousness. There have been times in the past when this nation had to turn its back on peace, yet no man would say today that when Abraham Lincoln accepted, for himself and his people, the ordeal of battle, he wanted to lead the country into war, or that he did not accept the soul-torture of mankind.

"The same issue confronted the King of Belgium. He had only a short time to decide. His first duty was to protect his own people and keep them at peace, but he had a higher duty, and he was willing to sacrifice his own people because he heard the nobler call—the call of honor. The question is whether it is the duty of the nation to keep out of the war and what is its duty toward those nations that are engaged in the war. What about this phrase 'international conscience'? I am free to confess that America has not risen to the appreciation as a people of the obligation resting upon them as a nation."

Mr. Hibben scored the "painful, pitiful littleness" of our aid to Belgium, and continued:

"The trouble is we have not the first vestige of an international conscience. We forget. We are aroused to enthusiasm for a little while, but we have not the gift to continue it. Compare the state of mind of the country at the time of the sinking of the Lusitania with that of today. I do not know what others think, but I think Count von Bernstorff should have been sent home the very day after that happened.

"But in the end we dismissed the German Ambassador, and we stand ready today to go to war with Germany, yet we are not prepared as a nation to go to war with any country, European or Asiatic, excepting perhaps China. And why are we so brave now? Let us be frank. There is only one reason why we are brave. We are brave because we know that the great British fleet stands between us and attack at the present time.

"Let us go thoroughly into this question and ask ourselves what do we believe. If we believe that the iron rule of a world empire is threatening Europe, and even America, and that the whole civilization of Europe is hanging in the balance, should not we of America have a part in the war—and not wait until we are forced into it? If we believe that the Allies are fighting for a righteous cause, the cause of justice and the old decencies and humanities, why should we not have a part and a lot with them?

"I believe that is the solemn obligation resting upon us—not that we should be driven into the war to defend our commerce. Why can we not say with the spirit of our fathers, 'Here is a great wrong that is being committed in the name of civilization and of culture,' and prepare to lead our forces to stop it? I do not wish to see Germany crushed, nor to bring her to her knees, but I do wish that over this ambition of a world empire that Germany has had for the last forty years there should be written across the face of all history one word—and that word 'failure,' just as it was written at the time of Napoleon.

"In order that there may be some possibility of a permanent peace after the war, let America have some part in that peace. I do not see how we are to have a part in it unless we are to share in the burdens of war. There will be a new Europe after the war, and a new world spirit there; and there is a possibility that then we shall be called 'the old world'—God forbid such should be our destiny!

"So let us all resolve to support our country and our flag. The flag should stand for the protection of our citizens and our citizens should stand for the protection of the flag. We may be called upon in a few days, or even in a few hours. God grant when the call comes we shall not be found wanting!"

President Hibben closed with a plea for fairly shared universal military service.

COLLEGE HEADS ON DEFENSE

Society of the Genessee Interviews Presidents for Annual Dinner.

National defense will be the topic for discussion at the eighteenth annual dinner of the Society of the Genessee, to be held at the Hotel Knickerbocker on Saturday evening, March 3. The speakers will be Major Gen. George W. Goethals, Dr. Rush Rhees, Don C. Seitz, Dr. John H. Finley, and Frederick C. Tanner. Elon H. Hooker, President of the society, asked the leading university Presidents for their views on this subject and has received replies which are, in part, as follows:

Arthur T. Hadley, Yale—"I believe that the university should be so organized as to train men who can serve as officers for the instruction of reserves in time of peace and for acting as their leaders in time of war."

John Grier Hibben, Princeton—"I am very strongly of the opinion that the university of today owes a particular obligation to the country to give its students some knowledge of military procedure so that in the event of a national emergency they may be of the greatest possible service to their country."

H. N. MacCracken, Vassar—"More useful, to my mind, than voluntary or compulsory military training in the colleges is the guidance of the individual student toward a resolve that the citizens of our country shall stand for the honor of their land."

Nicholas Murray Butler, Columbia—"It is my opinion that the specific military training of young men should be kept separate from their school and college life and should be under direct national supervision and control. In time of national need the universities should fulfill their obligation as public service institutions by putting their entire and already mobilized resources at the disposal of the Government."

Benjamin Ide Wheeler, University of California—"I am in favor of universal military service. When it comes to choosing officers for the reserve we Americans cannot base our choice, as Europe does, on social caste on the possession of goods; we must turn to the colleges."

David Starr Jordan, Stanford—"I do not believe that the universities have any normal relation to the military side of national defense beyond their general obligation to ascertain and to make known the truth. Military drill on the part of the students counts for very little in the way of military preparation, and its value does not compensate for its interference with study."

J. G. Schurman, Cornell—"Cornell was in a thorough condition of military preparedness before the nation-wide movement in favor of it began. It is the aim of Cornell to give undergraduates military training enough to qualify them to become Lieutenants of volunteers. And the annual inspections of the War Department show that this task is being accomplished successfully. If war were banished from our planet I would retain military training side by side with athletics as an instrument of physical education in our universities."

MOVIES FOR CATHOLICS.

Bishop Anderson and Mgr. Kelley Prepare Scenarios.

A company known as the Unique Film Corporation has been formed to manufacture a series of motion pictures called Catholic Truth films. The films are to be distributed, the advance announcement states, "to spread Christian truth," in connection with Catholic churches in each diocese.

The first production will be headed "A Dream of Empire," and will be based on historical happenings between the time of Napoleon and Pope Pius VII. The scenario was written by Bishop Joseph G. Anderson, auxiliary to Cardinal O'Connell of Boston. The Right Rev. Mgr. Francis C. Kelley, President of the Catholic Church Extension Society of the United States, is the author of the second, which will be entitled "Christianity." Approval of the plans for the films has been obtained from ecclesiastical authorities and arrangements for censoring them have been made.

CALLS ARMENIANS MARTYRS.

Lord Bryce Says Thousands Could Have Lived by Renouncing Religion.

The American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief made public yesterday a cablegram from Lord Bryce, former British Ambassador to the United States, in which he said thousands of the Armenians killed by the Turks could have lived had they renounced their faith and embraced Mohammedanism.

"Of the seven or eight hundred thousand Armenians who have perished in the recent massacres," said Lord Bryce, "many thousand have died as martyrs, by which I mean they have died for their Christian faith when they could have saved their lives by renouncing it. This has perhaps not been realized even by those who in Europe or America have read of and been horrified by the wholesale slaughter and hideous cruelties by which half of an ancient nation has been exterminated. They can hardly understand how there should be religious persecution in our time.

"It was not religious fanaticism that led the present rulers of Turkey to seek to root out Christianity. So far from being fanatics, most of these men, though nominally Mohammedans, have no religion whatever. Their aim was political. They wanted to make the whole Turkish Empire Mohammedan in order to make it uniform, with only one creed, and no differences between one class of subjects and another. They saw that the Christian part of the population, suffering under constant oppressions and cruelties, continued to turn its eyes westward and hope for some redress from the Christian nations; so they determined to eliminate Christianity altogether."

Immigrant Aid Society to Meet.

The annual meeting of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America will be held at Cooper Union on the evening of Feb. 28. Delegates and members from all over the United States will attend. Judge Leon Sanders is to preside, and the speakers will be Congressmen Bachrach of New Jersey, Gallivan of Massachusetts, Siegel of New York, and Fees of Ohio, also John D. Denmore, Solicitor of the Department of Labor, Isidor Hirschfield, the Rev. H. Waslensky, and Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein.

MAGAZINE TO BUILD FAR EASTERN TRADE

American Asiatic Association Enters Field to Introduce Our Products Into the Orient.

OPPORTUNITIES AFTER WAR

Demand Beyond the Pacific Far Greater Than That of South American Countries.

To stimulate trade with the Far East, including Australia, New Zealand and India, which is now beginning to attract the attention of exporters and manufacturers as South America did at the beginning of the war, the American Asiatic Association, of which Charles M. Schwab and Willard D. Straight are active members, has decided to issue as a trade developer a new magazine to be called Asia; the first edition of which will come out this week.

Leaders in the manufacture of steel, clothing and other great staples have been pointing for months to the opportunities for American exporters in Asia now and after the war, and Secretary Redfield of the Department of Commerce has begun a vigorous campaign to turn the attention of Amercans toward the business opportunities in the Orient. In an announcement of the first issue of Asia it is said:

"The new magazine, which is illustrated, is to be run along much broader lines than a trade paper, the effort being chiefly one of conveying through the publication of a fundamental interpretation of the life and spirit of China, Japan and the other great Oriental countries, in terms of their industrial progress. It is believed that American opportunity can best be presented in this way. The growing complication of the political relations of the powers in the Far East, particularly those developing out of the problem of Japan and China, with which this country must be concerned, has made it essential, in the opinion of leaders of American business, that the United States should more definitely realize its responsibilities, as well as its possibilities as an intermediary, as a friend both of China and Japan, in the interests of the settlement of dissensions and the maintenance of peace."

Among the leaders of the association besides those already mentioned are Eugene P. Thomas, President of the United States Steel Products Company; Lloyd Griscom, ex-United States Minister to Japan; Robert H. Patchin, Secretary of the National Foreign Trade Council; Martin Egan, formerly editor of the Manila Times, now with J. P. Morgan & Co., and Alba B. Johnson, President of the Baldwin Locomotive Works.

BERNSTORFF'S SHIP COALS.

May Leave Halifax Tomorrow—British Examination Completed.

HALIFAX, N. S., Feb. 25.—The work of replenishing the bunkers of the steamship Frederik VIII., which has ex-Ambassador von Bernstorff and a large party of Germans from the United States on board, was begun today. Although the authorities declined to make any statement as to when the ship would be permitted to sail for Copenhagen, it was said that the examination of passengers, cargo, and baggage, which had been in progress since her arrival from New York on Feb. 16, had been completed. It was reported that the vessel would leave on next Tuesday night.

So far as could be learned tonight, nothing of particular interest to the British authorities was found in the passengers' luggage more than 2,000 trunks and bags were taken from the ship and placed in the freight sheds on the pier to which the Frederik was tied last Thursday, and were examined thoroughly.

PASSION PLAYS FOR LENT.

West Hoboken and Union Hill See Saviour's Life on Stage.

In West Hoboken and in Union Hill, N. J., yesterday amateur casts of Roman Catholic communicants presented passion plays which they will continue to perform at intervals during Lent. In St. Joseph's Hall in West Hoboken, where the play had the sub-title "Veronica's Veil," and in Columbus Hall in Union Hill, where the Holy Family Church staged its presentation, the episodes in the life of Jesus were depicted with great vividness to the enthrallment of the audiences which filled the halls.

Joseph Haish impersonated Christ in the first named performance and John Wallum in the second. This is the second season of the St. Joseph's company.

DORION SUES FOR DIVORCE.

Accused Wife Says Charges Are an "Outrageous Conspiracy."

Mrs. Abby B. Norris Dorion, a stenographer in the office of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., at 26 Broadway, has been sued for a divorce by Earl D. Dorion of Bretton Hall on the ground of misconduct on Feb. 9 last in an apartment at 200 West Seventieth Street. Mrs. Dorion charges that she is the victim of an "outrageous conspiracy," and says she will furnish a complete defense when the suit is tried.

Ocean Travelers.

These passengers arrived yesterday from Colon and Santiago on the steamship Tivives:

U. S. Senator James W. Wadsworth, William Littauer, L. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. R. Alger, Miss Carolyn F. Alger, Mr. and Mrs. Chester H. Arnold, F. R. Bogart, Miss Isabel Bridgeman, Mr. and Mrs. Howard M. Beazell, Arthur Blackbone, Mr. and Mrs. William Boyd, John Brown, Walter E. Burke, Arthur Carpenter, Frank Cooper, William Carson, Mrs. Helen Cobb, Miss Lorna Tweedy, Francis Taylor, Harry L. Williams, Miss Susan White, Mrs. Ester Upham, Oliver H. Everett, Edgar Gentry, and G. R. Moseley.

YESTERDAY'S CONCERTS.

Chadwick's "Aphrodite" Played by New York Symphony Orchestra.

At the concert of the New York Symphony Orchestra in Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon George W. Chadwick's symphonic poem "Aphrodite" was played for the first time in New York; Mozart's "Symphoni Concertante," for violin and viola with orchestra, was heard for the first time at these concerts, and a concerto by Liapunoff, unfamiliar to many concert goers, was played. Enesco's first Rumanian Rhapsody was the concluding number.

Mr. Chadwick's piece was first made public at the Norfolk (Conn.) festival in June, 1912. It was suggested to the composer by the contemplation of a head of Aphrodite in the Boston Art Museum, and in the music he has undertaken to depict the poetic or tragic scenes that may have passed before the sightless eyes of such a goddess standing on the coast of the Aegean Sea. He has felt the poetic possibilities of this idea, and has found ample and varied expression for it in his music, which thus has a "program" of the more poetic and less literal sort, that seeks only to give a stimulus and a direction to the listener's thought. There are nine sections of the work, for which, at the first production, Mr. Chadwick provided explanations in some detail, but it was his intention then that there should be much less definite information given in the future, and so it was in the program notes of yesterday's concert. The opening "apostrophe," the suggestion of the shimmering sea, a storm, a love scene, a pastoral theme, a military episode, were pointed out. They were enough for the purpose. The music shows some of Mr. Chadwick's finest and furthest-reaching imagination and most accomplished technical skill. The musical ideas for the most part have beauty and distinction; a few passages in the "military" episode are those which lapse most from this distinction. There is true power in their development. There is much skill in the orchestration, in the rich coloring. It was unfortunate that the celesta of the score had to be represented by a pianoforte; something was lost thereby.

Mr. Damrosch gave a sympathetic performance of the composition, with an appreciation of the composer's poetic intentions. There was much applause, and Mr. Chadwick, who was present in the hall, rose to acknowledge it.

Mme. Leginska gave a brilliant and powerful performance of Liapunoff's concerto, filled with an intense and nervous energy. The concerto is elaborate in its accumulation of difficulties, in its bravura style. It is in one movement, with three sections, in which there is a general community of theme. The principal theme is a good deal overworked, hardly developed; and the really musical interest of the concerto is not great. Mme. Leginska's tempestuous performance was much applauded. There was not unfortunately much distinction in Messrs. Saslovsky and Lifschey's performance of Mozart's "Symphonie Concertante."

Sibelius's second symphony in D, which had been played earlier in the season, was the most substantial orchestral number in yesterday's program of the Philharmonic Society. It is music of strong and vigorous fibre, as is his first symphony, also recently played here. But Fritz Kreisler probably engrossed the attention of the audience more than any mere symphony could do. He played Tschaikowsky's concerto, and there was naturally prodigious enthusiasm over it. The rest of the program was made up of two operatic selections—the prelude to the third act of Humperdinck's "Königskinder" and the so-called "Love Scene" from Strauss's "Feuersnot"—and Chabrier's glowing and brilliant rhapsody, "España."

This last was also played again in the evening, when it made up one of the orchestral numbers of the popular concert at the Metropolitan Opera House. An interesting novelty was the playing of the Société des Instruments Anciens, the four-stringed instruments, with the harpsichord, who have been heard more appropriately in the intimate surroundings of the Little Theatre and elsewhere. It was surprising, however, how well their finely balanced and searching tone carried in the Opera House. The audience was interested in the ballet by Montéclair and the suite by Lovenziti that they played.

Miss Gabrielle Gills, also a French artist, a soprano, made her first public appearance in New York, and disclosed a powerful and well managed voice and an artistic style in the air of Louise, from Charpentier's opera, and a group of modern French songs. Fernando Carpi, a tenor, of this company also sang, and Mr. Hageman conducted.

WARNING IN CASE OF WAR.

Committee of Manufacturers to Prepare Against Socialist Designs.

V. Everit Macy, President of the National Civic Federation, has written to 100 manufacturers, representatives of labor, and leaders in agriculture, inviting them to become members of a committee to co-operate with the National Council of Defense. His letter contained a warning that Socialists and other radicals were ready to take advantage of many emergencies to insist that the Government assume permanent control of many branches of private industry. This warning was predicated on the circumstance that the country might be drawn into war, but indicated also the attitude of the federation on the general principle of governmental control of business.

"Concerted effort, poise, and knowledge will be requisite," Mr. Macy wrote, "to deal with the question: How far shall the Government, through the stress of war necessity, enter into private industry? As in Europe, so in this country, in the event of war it may be necessary for the Government to take over certain lines of production and distribution. But it is the duty of the American economists, business men, and labor and agricultural leaders to take care that this is done as an 'emergency war measure,' so to speak. All sorts of pressure will be brought by Socialists and other radicals, here as there was in Europe, demanding that the Government shall continue after the war in the same lines of endeavor, irrespective of the waste, inefficiency, and despotism that attend all drastic governmental activities. Also, in the indiscriminate clamor for such governmental action we should see to it that only those enterprises are included in which, irrespective of cost, centralized control is indispensable."

Police Captain J. F. Linden.

Police Captain John F. Linden, in charge of the Coney Island Precinct until he went on sick leave last August, died yesterday at his home, 30 Linden Avenue, in his fifty-third year. He joined the Police Department in 1895, and for many years was attached to the Detective Bureau. His wife survives him.

SUFFRAGISTS PLEDGE AID TO THE NATION

Declare at Washington Meeting That 2,000,000 Women Will Serve in the Country's Crisis.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The National American Woman Suffrage Association at a mass meeting today pledged its loyalty to the Government in the event of war and offered the services of its 2,000,000 members to assist in the organization of the country to meet the crisis. A note adopted today by the Executive Council of the Suffrage Association, to be sent to President Wilson, says:

> We devoutly hope and pray that our country's crisis may be passed without recourse to war. We declare our belief that the settlement of international difficulties by bloodshed is unworthy of the twentieth century, and our confidence that our Government is using every honorable means to avoid conflict. If, however, our nation is drawn into the maelstrom, we stand ready to serve our country with the zeal and consecration which should ever characterize those who cherish high ideals of the duty and obligation of citizenship.
> With no intention of laying aside our constructive, forward work to secure the vote for the womanhood of this country as the right protective of all rights, we offer our services to our country in the event they should be needed, and, in so far as we are authorized, we pledge the loyal services of our more than 2,000,000 members.

To unify the efforts of all women's organizations and co-operate with the Government authorities, the association plans to formulate a Central Committee composed of representatives from "each national organization of women willing to aid in war work if the need arises." The Suffrage Association itself expects to establish a bureau to work out plans for employing women in positions left vacant by men who might go to war.

Secretary of War Baker, addressing the meeting, discussed the elimination of waste, which the war in Europe had affected. "There is no people so wasteful as we are," he said. "It is not wanton waste, but perhaps a part of modern civilization. We have lived like untrained children in a rich garden, trampling down the flowers. A lesson against waste is being brought home to every civilized man in the world under the iron heel of necessity. When peace comes, Europe will be populated by a people who have learned not to waste."

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont of New York today made a contribution of $5,000 to the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage to help finance the suffrage demonstration at the White House next Sunday. Women from all parts of the country will participate in the demonstration, the object of which will be to further the passage of the resolution submitting a constitutional amendment for woman suffrage to the States.

The contributions for this purpose received today amounted to $12,500. The Massachusetts branch of the Congressional Union gave $1,000, the Pennsylvania branch $5,000, the Colorado branch $2,000, and the Delaware branch $500.

The Woman's Party and the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage will hold a joint convention in Washington this week, and the two organizations will be amalgamated.

Marriage and death notices intended for insertion in The New York Times may be telephoned to 1000 Bryant.

COLUMBIA TO STAGE OPERA THIS SUMMER

Eduardo Petri Engaged as the Director—Gymnasium to be Used as a Theatre.

METROPOLITAN TO AID PLAN

First Venture of Kind Ever Undertaken by Any University—Open to the General Public.

A series of grand opera is to be a feature of the Summer session at Columbia University. This announcement was made yesterday by Professor James C. Egbert, director of the session. The department of choral and church music will have charge, and the musical director will be Eduardo Petri, director of the chorus school of the Metropolitan Opera Company and himself a Master of Arts of Columbia.

The company has been selected in part, but Mr. Petri is not yet ready to announce the operas that will be produced. He has been assured of the sympathy and co-operation of the Metropolitan Company in the venture.

"I shall endeavor to engage the best artists in America for the Summer session," said Mr. Petri. "It is the desire of Professor Egbert and myself to obtain talent that will attract not only the 6,000 or more students who come to Columbia from all over the country for the Summer course, but also that part of the music-loving public which may remain in the city during the Summer months. The time is opportune, as many singers, because of the war, will remain in this country next Summer. Besides, American talent of the first class will also be obtained if possible."

Mr. Petri said the repertory was being carefully considered, as both variety and educational advantages were to be considered. The director said he had in mind a certain repertory, but his desires would have to be subordinated to the engagements of the artists. He has gone over his plans with Mr. Gatti-Casazza, director of the Metropolitan, and others influential in the opera company.

It is the desire of Professor Egbert to have the operas set a high mark in artistic accomplishment, and he said his great interest in the course would be to furnish to the Summer students educational opportunities which usually could be enjoyed only during the Winter term. No university has, it is said, ever before attempted to give grand opera within academic walls, and for this reason educators all over the country, it is expected, will watch the new course with much interest and the closest attention.

The Columbia gymnasium, which is to be used as an opera house, will accommodate about 2,500 persons. Special scenery will be painted for the operas. Concerts, oratorios, and other musical events will be given at Columbia as in past years.

CARUSO IS FORTY-FOUR.

Famous Tenor's Friends Give Him a Party on His Birthday.

Signor Caruso celebrated his forty-fourth birthday yesterday, some of his friends in New York, in anticipation of the event, having arranged a musicale on Saturday night, at which Leo Ornstein, the pianist, and other artists appeared.

On the stroke of midnight 200 guests pledged Caruso's health, and the tenor himself was the most surprised of all those concerned in the affair. The famous Italian has sung for fourteen years in America. His two sons are at Caruso's villa near Florence, where the elder boy was recently called to the colors among the next class to serve with the Italian Army in the European war.

Special "Carmen" Matinee.

"Carmen" will be given at a special matinée, at special prices, on Friday afternoon, March 9, at the Metropolitan Opera House, with Mmes. Farrar, Mason, Garrison, and Braslau, and Messrs. Martinelli, Whitehill, Rothier, Leonhardt, Bada, and Laurenti. Miss Rosina Galli will dance and Mr. Polacco will conduct.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

G. B. Shaw's play "Mrs. Warren's Profession," which was the cause of much controversy when it was first acted here, ten years ago, will be revived by Mary Shaw at a special performance on the afternoon of April 12. The performance will be for the benefit of the building fund of the Gamut Club, of which Miss Shaw is President. She will play the title rôle, in which she appeared when the play was first produced.

The Irish Players, a local organization of actors and actresses of Irish birth or descent, will give a series of performances here next month. Whitford Kane will be the artistic director of the enterprise.

Stasia Balloff has succeeded Sofia Karty as premiere danseuse of the ballet in the second act of "The Wanderer" at the Manhattan Opera House. She was born in New Jersey, and her real name is Elizabeth Hodge. When the war came she was dancing at the Paris Opera House, and for the last two years she has been serving as a nurse at Neuilly.

The other members of the cast of Oliver Morosco's production of Galsworthy's "The Fugitive" not given yesterday in THE NEW YORK TIMES are Charlotte Granville, Charles Harbury, Thomas MacSarnie, and Duncan McRae.

"Miss Springtime" will register its 200th performance at the New Amsterdam tonight, while in Boston a second company will begin its eighth week at the Tremont.

W. Somerset Maugham's latest comedy, "Our Betters," will be presented at the Hudson Theatre on Monday night, March 12, following the engagement of Elsie Ferguson in "Shirley Kaye" at that theatre.

Jacques Copeau, founder of the Theatre du Vieux Colombier, Paris, will read Corneille's "Menteur" on Friday evening at the Maison Francaise, 411 West 117th Street. Requests for admission should be addressed to Miss Madeleine Doby, Secretary, at that address. During his stay here M. Copeau will speak twice before the Institute of Arts and Sciences of Columbia University. His first talk will be on the mise en scene of Molière.

Alf Hayman has received a letter from Sir James M. Barrie, in which the author says that he hopes to visit America this Spring in time to see Maude Adams in his play, "A Kiss for Cinderella."

Julia Sanderson, who is appearing in the musical comedy, "Sybil," at the Illinois Theatre, Chicago, will retire from the cast at the end of the Chicago engagement on account of illness, it was announced in this city yesterday by the Charles Frohman Company.

NEW COLOR MOVIES SHOWN.

The movies have merely scratched the surface. The enthusiasts have proclaimed all along that as they developed they would gain in effectiveness, and pointed to the possibilities of color reproduction as one of the directions in which they would develop. How infinite these possibilities are became evident at the Strand yesterday, when color movies made by a new process were shown for the first time.

The subjects were many and varied, and included land and seascapes, animal pictures, and portraits of people. The irridescence of the surface of a soap-bubble in the sunlight, the glow of a woman's cheek, the brilliance of the setting sun have all been caught and reflected with amazing veracity. One especially alluring picture of a herd of cattle rounding the crest of a hill gave the feeling of a Bonheur painting come to life. The color gives a third dimension to the pictures, so that in many instances the perspective is quite remarkable. The films were made by the Prizma process.

A commendable screen version of Oliver Goldsmith's "The Vicar of Wakefield" was exhibited yesterday at the Rialto. This film had the honor of being the first one to win the stamp of approval of the recently formed Photoplay League. The movies love misery if it can be shut off in time for a happy ending, so this classic in which the woes of the Primrose family are recited conforms to the photoplay norm.

A careful selection of backgrounds has helped give an old English flavor to the picture. More than to any other one factor, however, it owes its success to the acting of Frederick Warde in the title rôle. That veteran of many rôles and years not only looks the part, but acts it with great skill and understanding.

Rex Beach's Alaskan story, "The Barrier," has been made into a strong photoplay, which was exhibited for the first time yesterday at the Broadway. The film's makers have succeeded in conveying to it something of the virility of this author's stories. The players were chosen with a sense of types. An adaptation of Winston Churchill's novel, "The Crisis," was put on exhibition at the Park.

'NAGGING' MADE HER LEAVE.

Margaret Smith, 15, Quits Home After Writing Note to Mother.

Margaret Smith, fifteen years old, of 2,009 Seventh Avenue has been missing from her home since Saturday, according to her father, Alexander Smith, who asked the Fourth Branch Detective Bureau to find her. Detective McGee discovered that the girl had been carrying on a correspondence with some young man, and that complaints had recently been made that she was frequently absent from the Washington Irving High School. She left this note to her mother:

"I am going away. It is true that I stayed home from school. I went to shows. I am sick of nagging. I will be right here in New York. I am able to take care of myself."

Before leaving, she borrowed $10 from her brother and packed a suit case and satchel which she was carrying when last seen by Helen Sulka, a maid, at 10 o'clock on Saturday night. She is five feet four and a half inches tall, blonde with blue eyes and weighs 120 pounds. She had a scar on her left cheek near the eye. When last seen, she was wearing a long green coat trimmed with beaver and tan buttons, white shoes, and a blue straw hat trimmed with red cherries.

AVALANCHE KILLS MINERS.

Nine Bodies Recovered, 6 Missing, in Idaho Disaster.

BOISE, Idaho, Feb. 25.—An avalanche swept down on the buildings of the North Star Mine, twelve miles northeast of the town of Hailey, early today, demolishing the compressor house, warehouse, and bunkhouse, smothering and crushing the sleeping men in the snow and débris.

The bodies of nine miners had been recovered tonight, six were missing and probably dead, and fifteen were injured, some seriously. Among the injured is Thomas Jay, the mine Superintendent.

The Federal Mining and Smelting Company, which owns the mine, early today had a force of men engaged in recovering the dead. The possibility of finding any of the victims alive was minimized by the danger of precipitating a second slide across the canyon, and all rescue crews were ordered to stop their work tonight.

WHEAT ELEVATORS BURN.

500,000 Bushels of Grain Destroyed in $1,000,000 Louisville Fire.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 25.—Damage aggregating more than $1,000,000 was caused by a fire which tonight destroyed the elevators here of the Kentucky Public Elevator Company and destroyed or damaged seventy-five freight cars standing on storage tracks belonging to the Illinois Central aRilroad.

Approximately 500,000 bushels of corn, wheat, rye, and oats stored in the elevators were destroyed. Of the railroad cars destroyed, a few were empty, while the remainder were loaded with merchandise and lumber.

Reception to Signora Galli-Curci.

Signora Amelita Galli-Curci, prima donna of the Chicago opera, whose sensational conquest of the West has been heralded in New York, was the guest of honor at a reception given yesterday by William Thorner. The Italian star is about to make a concert tour of America, filling the dates left vacant by Emmy Destinn, detained in Austria during the war, and by Mary Garden, who returns to France this week on the Spanish liner Alfonso XII. Among those at Mr. Thorner's reception were Messrs. Polacco, Papi, Carpi, de Lucca, de Segurola, Didur, Seligsberg, and others of the Metropolitan forces.

A mediaeval masque entitled "The Tournament and Festival of Fools at the Court of Raymond, Count of Toulouse," will be given for the benefit of the American Red Cross Society tonight at the Fine Arts Building, 215 West Fifty-seventh Street, in connection with the closing of the thirty-second annual exhibition of the Architectural League. The masque has been arranged and will be produced under the direction of Howard Greenly and George Chappell. The performance will be followed by a dance in the Vanderbilt Gallery.

Mme. Schumann-Heink Improving.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 25.—The condition of Mme. Schumann-Heink, the operatic contralto, who broke two ribs in a taxicab accident Friday night, is slightly improved, physicians announced tonight. No internal injuries have developed.

CHANCE FOR INDIA TRADE.

Changed Conditions Give Americans Opening in Cotton Goods Market.

The Presidency of Bengal, in India, imports as much cotton goods as the whole of South America. According to a report just issued by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Bengal spends $100,000,000 a year for foreign-made cotton goods. This is 10 per cent. of the total world's trade in cotton goods, and American manufacturers have practically no share in it.

Americans do not now make the kind of goods required by the market, says Ralph M. Odell, author of the bureau's report, and until they do it is not likely that they will ever get much of the business. The rising cost of production in England, which supplies nearly all of these goods, however, makes it possible for Americans to compete in at least some of the qualities that are imported, provided they supply the right kind of goods.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION IN AMERICA AND EUROPE

The public at large probably paid more attention last week to the high cost of living and railroad congestion than it did to the even more momentous problem involved in the threat which Germany has made against our commerce and that of all other neutral nations. It is almost inevitable, however, that the latter will again become the dominant consideration in the stock market, and that, perhaps, before very long.

It is essential, therefore, to keep in mind the fact that the issue between the United States and Germany has not been met, and that it must be. It is a situation which, if forgotten, might at any moment yield some development which would take the market by surprise. Common prudence suggests that the grave possibilities be not ignored, the more so inasmuch as the public is receiving no clear indication of the course which events are likely to take. That should not lead any one to the conclusion that the danger involved in Germany's declaration of unrestricted submarine warfare has passed, for it has not.

There is no sufficient ground for the theory entertained in some quarters that Germany does not mean to carry out her threat so far as American ships are concerned; so long as the chief units of the American merchant marine remain in port, so long have we ocular demonstration of the belief of American shipowners that Germany does mean to carry out her threat against us if she gets the chance. The mere fact that there has not been another American holocaust at sea is no proof that Germany has in fact, though not openly, instructed her submarine commanders to respect American ships and American lives. She certainly is not respecting the rights of other neutrals, as the torpedoing of seven Dutch boats in a single day clearly enough shows. It has yet to be shown that she respects us any more than she does other neutrals.

But the problems involved in this, the gravest of the situations confronting the country, were largely in abeyance so far as active influence upon last week's stock market was concerned. There were a number of other things nearer the surface and important enough in their way to hold the attention of the financial community. Notice had necessarily to be taken of the agitation over the high cost of living and of the many remedies proposed, some of them being sufficiently radical to suggest that the methods which Europe has had to resort to in the face of war are looked upon by many in this country as acceptable means to resort to, though this country is still at peace. The fact is that food is not scarce, though it is very dear, and it would be both more plentiful and much cheaper had last year's crops turned out well instead of turning out badly. Neither the seizure of food supplies nor any system of public markets will increase the yield of last year's crops, nor will that be accomplished by the searching out of conspiracies to raise the price of foodstuffs, though if any such exist they should be stamped out with all the vigor which the law can command.

The present situation suggests at least two things which should be done: one is to encourage the production of foodstuffs, which had better be too plentiful than too scanty, and to provide adequate transportation facilities for moving to market not only foodstuffs but all other commodities. It is plain enough now, if it was not before, that the country's transportation facilities, and particularly its terminal facilities, as they are now operated, are not sufficient for the country's needs. If restrictions on rates are at all responsible for the present situation, it is high time that higher rates be allowed, yet it is not at all sure that all has been done that can be done to ameliorate the situation through cooperation between shippers and carriers. When the Newlands Commission resumes its hearings, as it is expected that it will shortly after the adjournment of Congress, it will have new incentive to get at the bottom of the railroad situation and to suggest the proper remedies. Is there not this much consolation in the situation for the holder of railroad securities that the need of doing something is so manifest that it can no longer be ignored?

We have been experiencing some of the embarrassments of prosperity, and it is likely that the country will come to realize that there is such a thing as having too much trade within a given period. We have been compelled to trade not only very largely but very fast, because so much of the trade which has come to us has been too urgent to be denied even to the extent of waiting until the trade could be handled comfortably. Moreover, so far as foreign trade is concerned, the means of carrying it on have been decreased as the trade has increased. There was published last week the record of our foreign trade in January. Exports reached the huge figure of $613,000,000 for the month. And now trade seeks to continue on that scale despite the fact that ships are being sunk faster than they are being replaced and that many ships, including a number of our own, are staying in port for lack of any sort of protection against the threat which Germany has directed against the world.

It may well seem under the circumstances that we have too much trade; it is in such terms as these that we are paying part of the price of the prosperity which we have enjoyed and which we will no doubt continue to enjoy. The ills from which we are suffering now are temporary. The coming of Spring will do much to hasten the movement of freight on the railways, and the measures which England is adopting to restrict imports will come as a relief rather than as a hardship to a country which is finding it hard to meet the demands which a huge foreign trade has added to the greatest domestic trade which any nation has ever done.

Were we at a loss to find a market for our goods instead of being at a loss to fill the orders which we have there might be occasion for concern over England's decision to curtail her imports, but under existing conditions there is nothing in her program which need give us alarm. The percentage by which our trade with Great Britain is likely to be reduced is not very large, and there is no real loss in losing a little trade at a time when we have more than we can handle to advantage. Costs are vastly increased by congestion, and there is nothing to be gained from doing more trade at less profit. There would be if thereby idle hands could be put to work, but the scarcity in the United States is of labor, not of jobs.

It was suggested in last week's news that the American Government's plans for dealing with the submarine menace would be made known before Congress adjourns. That is surely a plausible expectation, and it may, therefore, be that the uncertainty which has existed in respect to a matter which transcends all others may soon be brought to an end.

LONDON MARKET DULL.

New Import Rules Likely to Curtail Some Enterprises.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The figures of the new war loan exceeded expectations, but stocks were only temporarily stimulated thereby. Business was narrow last week, owing to the great absorption of funds.

The proceeds of the loan received by the Exchequer to Feb. 17 amounted to £324,000,000, of which £211,000,000 was employed in repaying temporary advances, while about £100,000,000 represented further redemption and partly conversion of Treasury bills.

The money market is no longer in danger of disturbance resulting from big transfers, but there is general apprehension that stringency will recur in the early days of March in consequence of further loan payments, so discounts have maintained a firm tone. Substantial amounts of Treasury bills are offering with a view to providing funds against a coming demand.

In view of the great increase in current expenditures in all directions, the general tone of the market at the close was dull.

It is felt, as a consequence of the Prime Minister's speech demonstrating the serious nature of the shipping problem, owing to submarine losses and the great demands being made on tonnage, that numerous business enterprises are likely to be much curtailed, more particularly because of the prohibition against importing goods of certain classes; but it is believed that the international financial problem may be simplified by the restrictions put upon imports, and the course of the foreign Exchanges will be closely watched for the effect of this move.

Regulations and the first list of securities desired have been issued under a Treasury order for compulsory requisition.

The Bankers' Clearing House return for the week ended Wednesday showed a record total of £475,000,000 in consequence of war loan payments.

BOURSE STOCKS GAIN.

Interest Grows in Shipping Shares, with Higher Prices.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—The week on the Bourse was dull and uneventful, with interest still confined to the rubber, copper, and speculative war stocks. The war loan was firm at 87.80. Rentes were slightly easier, at 61.85. French bank, railway, Russian, rubber, and copper shares were all easier, without much volume of business. There was more interest in the shipping shares after the British statement on the blockade, and gains on the week were recorded by Transatlantique, up 7; Messageries Maritime, up 8; Chargeurs Reunis, up 130; Havraise Peninsular, up 135, and Chargeurs Francais, up 5. The closing was very firm. Some of the war issues are still favored.

All excursion and other cheap railroad tickets are to be withdrawn on March 1. Further modifications of existing railway service are foreshadowed.

A bill extending the existing fiscal scheme was passed by the Chamber of Deputies a few days ago. The new food regulations are working smoothly.

The gold held in the vaults of the Bank of France amounts to 3,196,918,967 francs, and the amount held abroad remains unchanged at 1,945,603,286 francs. Advances to the French Government on account of the war show an increase for the week of 200,000 francs. Advances to foreign allied Governments show an increase of 25,000,000 francs.

ALCOHOL PROFIT $6,727,042.

U. S. Industrial Co. in 1915 Earned Only $2,734,607.

The United States Industrial Alcohol Company reports earnings of $6,727,042, after paying operating expenses, in 1916, compared with $2,734,607 the year before. The major part of the unusually large income was derived from alcohol sold to manufacturers of gunpowder and dyestuffs. After setting aside $1,583,212 for maintenance and depreciation, compared with $176,469 in 1915, a balance of $5,044,343 remained for interest and dividends. In the previous year the balance was $2,259,784.

The dividends paid on the company's preferred stock and the preferred shares of the Cuba Distilling Company absorbed $548,562, and the surplus available for common stock dividends totaled $4,336,024. This was equivalent to more than 36 per cent. on the outstanding common shares, against 33.23 per cent. in 1915.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Stock Exchange firm of W. W. Lanahan & Co., the home office of which is in Baltimore, announces that the business of Dobson & Co., 66 Broadway, will be absorbed on March 1, and that Benjamin Dobson will become manager of the investment department.

The William R. Compton Company has prepared for distribution a record book for individual use in listing income tax returns.

INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPANY

30 Broad Street
New York

To the Holders of Bonds and Preferred and Common Stock:

The International Paper Company hereby gives notice that it has prepared a plan for the consolidation of its bonded debt under one mortgage, and offers bondholders the right to exchange present bonds for new First and Refunding Five Per Cent. Sinking Fund Mortgage Bonds, as set forth in a circular letter, dated January 31, 1917, addressed to the Company's bondholders.

The Directors of the Company have also unanimously voted to offer to Preferred Stockholders, in full settlement of all deferred dividends—

7½ per cent. of the face value of their holdings of Preferred Stock in cash,

14 per cent. in Six Per Cent. Cumulative Preferred Stock,

12 per cent. in Common Stock, provided, however, that the holders of such an amount of Preferred Stock as the Company and the Committee representing the Preferred Stockholders shall deem sufficient, shall accept said offer by depositing their stock with Bankers Trust Company, Depositary, 16 Wall Street, New York, subject to a Deposit Agreement bearing even date herewith. Copies of this Deposit Agreement, including circular letter to Stockholders, outlining in detail the plan of adjustment, and copies of letter to the bondholders, may be obtained upon application to Bankers Trust Company, Depositary, or from the International Paper Company, whose officers will be glad to answer any inquiries or give any further information that may be desired.

Copies of letters and Deposit Agreement are being mailed to Stockholders of Record and to Bondholders whose names are known to the Company.

Dated January 31, 1917.

PHILIP T. DODGE, President.

To Holders of Certificates for Shares of Preferred Stock of the International Paper Company:

At the request of the International Paper Company and of holders of a substantial amount of its preferred stock, who have already approved of and assented to the plan for the payment and refunding of the bonded debt of the Company, and the adjustment of the deferred dividends upon its preferred stock referred to in the foregoing notice, and subject to the terms of the deposit agreement therein mentioned, we have consented to act as a Committee to represent the holders of such preferred stock in the execution of the said plan.

We recommend the proposed plan and the acceptance of the offer made by the Company to adjust the said dividends, and trust that prompt co-operation of the stockholders will be received.

Holders of preferred stock are urged to immediately deposit their certificates, duly endorsed for transfer in blank or accompanied by proper instruments of transfer, with the Bankers Trust Company, Depositary, 16 Wall Street, New York City. Such deposit will impose no expense upon the stockholder, and without further act on the part of the stockholders depositing, will constitute their assent to and approval of the financial plan and the proposed adjustment of the deferred dividends, and all the terms of the deposit agreement.

Negotiable certificates of deposit will be issued by the depositary, and application will be made to have such certificates listed upon the New York Stock Exchange.

Unless the Committee and the Company shall hereafter extend the time, no deposits will be received after March 10, 1917.

The Secretary of the Committee will be glad to answer any inquiries or give any further information desired by any stockholders in regard to the foregoing.

Dated January 31, 1917.

GOVERNMENT ENTERS CEMENT MARKET

Seeks Thirty Thousand Barrels for Immediate Delivery at Sandy Hook.

DEMAND STIFFENS PRICES

Other Lines of Building Material Still Advancing and the Maximum Not in Sight.

Financiers analyzing the future metropolitan construction market on Saturday based their optimism as to the stability of the present construction inquiry on the heavy gold imports and their effect on foreign credits and immediate mortgage rates here, says The Dow Service Daily Building Reports today.

That demand for building material is still far from the maximum is shown by some of the movements in some of the basic lines, effective today. Common Hudson brick is quoted at $10 wholesale. For retail prices add dealers' profit and cartage. Second-hand common brick has been quoted as high as $5 per 1,500, which was the price asked for new Hudson River brick in December, 1914. Raritan River common brick is purchasable today only in carload lots at Sayerville at $10.50. The Raritan River on Saturday morning was still frozen tight, as was the Hudson.

Portland cement is steady on price, but exceedingly heavy in demand.

The total amount of Portland cement shipped to contractors and dealers in January, 1917, in this district was 20 per cent. in excess of that reported in January, 1916.

The entrance of the United States Government into the building material market is also having its influence in tightening demand and firming prices. The War Department placed an inquiry for bids to be opened on March 12 for 30,000 barrels of Portland cement for gun and mortar pits at Sandy Hook, calling for immediate delivery. This is only one item of inquiry which is in other branches of the material market for tremendous quantities for emergency delivery.

Current price changes this week show a sharp advance of 5 cents per square in rolled asphalt roofing. Inquiry was made in the composition roofing department as to whether the slight drop in the price of rags would affect the quotations of prepared roofing. Whatever gain has been made in the purchase of rags has been more than swallowed up in the price of coal and the extra transportation charges and costs due to demurrage incidental to the railroad embargoes.

In the composition roofing department the cost of nails for one concern has advanced $60,000 in the last eight months, and nails are given away free of charge with rolled roofing. This is a typical example of the manipulation of costs exercised by various companies in trying to keep prices down within reach of the average builder.

In the metal markets important price changes are current. Blue annealed sheets have advanced 35 cents. Refined iron bars are up 15 cents; X-2 Philadelphia pig iron has advanced $1, and is now quoted at $32. No. 2 Southern is now $27.40, representing a 50-cent increase. No. 2 pig iron, Birmingham, Ala., is quoted at $24.50, which is an advance of 50 cents. No. 2 pig iron at furnace, Chicago, is quoted at $33, representing an advance of $1. Malleable Bessemer is quoted at $33, an advance of $1.

Tank plates, Pittsburgh, are up 25 cents, and are quoted at New York at 5.169c, as against 4.919c last week. Galvanized sheets, No. 28, Pittsburgh, advanced 25 cents, and are now quoted at $6.25. Lake copper is quoted at $36, as against $34.50. Lead, New York, is $9.50, representing a gain of 50 cents.

Paint is scheduled to advance further. The cost of cans today, as compared with what they were in November, shows that one-gallon hole and cap can which was then 5.2c apiece is now 9c. Friction top can was then 8c, and is now 13.5c. One-pound gallon can, normally costing 13c, is now 22c. Linseed oil, which on Nov. 20 showed an advance of 80 per cent. over the quotation ruling a year ago last November, has since gone up 20 per cent. further. China wood oil is about 30 per cent. higher.

Shellac gums are up 150 per cent., and solvents more than 30 per cent., ochres 150 per cent., alcohol 50 per cent., and cans in the aggregate 100 per cent., and advertising and printed matter about 35 per cent. All these gains show price advances from Nov. 1 last year, and are not yet figurable into building costs this year, but into the cost of construction as late as the Spring of 1918.

It is known among well-informed building material interests that the Spring lists will show marked increases over the level prevailing today, and the tendency is to keep down speculative construction.

4 KILLED IN WRECK, MANY CARS BURNED

Express Hits Derailed Freight Near Bristol, Penn., and Ten-Hour Fire Follows.

SHOW HORSES DESTROYED

Shipments of News Print Paper and Food Also Lost—Spectators Get Booty.

Special to The New York Times.

BRISTOL, Penn., Feb. 25.—Four men and seventeen horses were killed, three men were injured, and more than thirty cars loaded with perishable food being rushed to relieve the food famine in the cities were destroyed in a wreck on the New York Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad a mile and a half east of here at 2:45 o'clock this morning. The killed are William King of Wilmington, Del., fireman of the engine on the express train; a man known only as "Long Tom," Thomas Burriss, and Harry Dunlap of Williamsport. The last three were horsemen in the express car. The injured are W. T. Hulihan, Williamsport; Thomas Rank, and Patrick Hayes, engineer of the express train.

A freight train, westbound on Track 3, was halted shortly after 2 o'clock by a broken axle on a car. At 2:45 a special Adams express, bound from Philadelphia to New York, crashed into the freight car, which had fallen over upon Track 2 in front of the express. The express engine was thrown across the four main tracks, and car after car piled up in a heap.

The wreckage took fire immediately, and soon the entire mass was ablaze. Four companies of Bristol firemen fought the flames for ten hours.

Behind the engine of the Adams Express special was a car filled with five blooded horses and a show pony. W. T. Hulihan was in charge of the horses, which were consigned to H. H. Wilson, Madison Square Garden, New York, where they were to be exhibited and offered for sale next Tuesday. In the car behind the six horses were Burriss, Dunlap, and "Long Tom." Hulihan says that among the horses killed were Captain R. A. Green, owned by himself, and Little Jewel and Bell Cord. Those which were taken out of the car slightly burned were Al Direct, Little Director, and the pony. The animals were said to be valued at $71,000.

Shipments of fruit, food supplies, and clothing were spilled over the rails for hundreds of yards, and carloads of news print paper also were destroyed. Sightseers, who were aroused from their beds by the ringing of the fire alarm, flocked to the scene and raided the cars for clothing and what food they could carry away.

All four tracks were torn up for several hundred yards, and traffic over the division was blocked, both east and west, for nearly twelve hours. Traffic was opened, with trains running thirty minutes late, at 3:55 P. M.

During the interruption of traffic trains between New York and the West were routed over the Trenton cutoff, passing through Langhorne to Trenton, while trains for Philadelphia and points south were sent down on the New Jersey side of the river from Trenton, and went into Philadelphia via the Delaware River bridge at Delair.

A Logical Result

We all know that success breeds success. And this announcement of a new and larger New York home for Marmon cars simply emphasizes this old truth.

When first placed on the market, more than a year ago, the Marmon 34 was received as an engineering triumph. Its success was immediate and lasting.

And the business of the Marmon New York Company has been carried forward so swiftly on the wave of Marmon 34 success that new and larger business quarters are necessary.

So, after about April 15th, we will take possession of the new show rooms which are being prepared for us in the Motor Mart Building, at the southeast corner of Sixty-second and Broadway. Here we will use 16,000 square feet of floor space.

The Service Department will remain at the present location of the company at 42 West Sixty-second Street, and the removal of the sales offices to Broadway will give us much-needed additional room.

These evidences of expansion to meet a rapidly growing business are in line with the policy of the officials of Nordyke & Marmon Company, Indianapolis, Indiana, owners of this company, to build up and maintain under factory control permanent and efficient representation in the metropolitan district.

"Your Trial Balance in Three Hours"

WHEN the Comptroller of The American Sugar Refining Company calls for a trial balance he gets it quick—"right off the fire." He knows that he can get accurate trial balance figures any day of any week in any month within three hours. The installation of Elliott-Fisher Bookkeeping Machines assured speed and accuracy in the Order, Billing and Sales Ledger Department of this great concern. They say:

> "We use Elliott-Fisher Bookkeeping Machines for posting our card ledgers and keeping them in constant balance. Because the accounts are always balanced, it is an easy matter for us to get our trial balance at the end of the month in two or three hours' time, without trouble. We use Elliott-Fisher Bookkeeping Machines for billing and order writing, making as high as 15 copies satisfactorily on them."

When Elliott-Fisher Machines were introduced, perpetual balance came in to stay. Night work and congestion, at trial balance time, departed for good.

Are your trial balance figures available on short notice? If not, one of our accounting specialists will be pleased to explain, without obligation on your part, how Elliott-Fisher will help you. Telephone "Barclay 7315" or address Elliott-Fisher Company, 404-5-6 Astor House Building, 217 Broadway.
